Prohibition Flying. Outstripping the Rockets. New Power Will Come. Meet the Aboona.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HENRY FORD said we must have prohibition because flying is here and air pilots must be sober.

Now prohibition itself confirms Mr. Ford's statement concerning the importance of sobriety in flying.

While "stunting" a few feet above the ground, Wilmer Stultz, brilliant aviator, who piloted Miss Earhart across the ocean, killed himself and passengers.

It is officially reported, following examination by a chemist for the district attorney, that Stultz was "very drunk" when he crashed.

Not a bad idea, except that YOU CAN'T close the speakeasies. And those speakeasies, unfortunately, sell the most deadly bootleg whiskey.

Frederick Sutter, an invalid, and 79 years old less one day, talked it over with his wife, 65 years old, on the Fourth. While the firecrackers were exploding, Mr. and Mrs. Sutter, with the aid of gas, went higher and farther than any skyrocket ever flew.

Their nephew found them side by side, with their arms around one another.

The Greeks and other ancients, would have approved that, believing that life is given us to keep or cast away.

Even in our Christian day, no one will blame too harshly the old couple for deciding to sleep longer than usual.

When this was written yesterday, Mitchell and Newcomb were about to break the world's endurance record, with the aid of refueling.

Any good aeroplane could easily fly around the earth without stopping, if it could carry enough fuel for the trip.

That will seem strange to our descendants, who will produce a tool to carry even today's imperfect planes around the world for times.

When ocean steamships with coal for power, were first suggested, engineers said:

"Even if it could work, it couldn't possibly carry enough coal for an ocean trip."

One of the Wright brothers said truly that he could fly around the earth on a barn door if he had power enough.

Chemistry will supply a new power, perhaps, by breaking down the atom, stripping the electrons from the nucleus, that will make today's gas engine seem as primitive as a Japanese servant pulling his master's jinricksha.

Read some day in that same "Astronomy and Cosmogony" by Jeans, his hypothesis as to the source of the sun's power, emitted ceaselessly through billions of years.

That is mentioned only because the word "Aboona" is such a pleasing word that it seems to describe so well the patriarch, religious ruler of 3,000,000 Ethiopians.

The new aboona, as usual, is an Egyptian. Abyssinia thinks he ought to be an Abyssinian, and that Abyssinian bishops should be appointed under him.

These complications, fortunately, do not interest us, although the World Court and League of Nations would probably hand us the entire problem, aboona and all, if we were foolish enough to "go in."

Mr. Lamont of Morgan & Co., able citizen and brilliant financier, emphasizes the importance of the Bank of International Acceptances, suggested by the reparations experts in Paris.

Mr. Lamont thinks the bank would have great and important world power and influence.

HUGE DRUG SEIZURE IN CHINATOWN

RAIDERS USE AXES TO SMASH BARRIERS

Two White Women Among 20 Prisoners Taken in 6 Places

The combined forces of the police vice squad, federal narcotic agents and local prohibition enforcement officers swooped down on Chinatown today in a series of six spectacular raids, making 20 arrests and seizing a huge supply of opium.

The raiders, using axes and sledges, smashed their way through barricades of "dens" in Albany, Edinboro, Tyler, Oliver and Hudson sts., making arrests and seizures in all except one.

All taken in custody were Chinese. Two white women were found in one "den" and released after questioning.

No official valuation was placed upon the opium confiscated, although it was declared of finest quality and admitted to be worth several thousand dollars. Also seized were several elaborate opium smoking "layouts."

Dr. H. H. Woutera, newly appointed narcotic chief for the New England district, directed the raiders, who met beforehand at Young's Hotel, temporary federal building. Seven federal narcotic officers, seven prohibition agents and six members of the police vice squad participated.

In three of the buildings entered, dens were discovered behind heavy steel barricades, which were forced by crowbars and sledges and the resulting turmoil as the raiders effected entrance, threw bland Chinatown into an uproar.

There was one slight casualty when Special Officer Joseph McGovern lost a tooth, his sledge rebounding from a steel door and striking him on the mouth.

In court before Judge Elijah Adlow, all 20 men arrested pleaded guilty to unlawful possession or to being present where narcotics were found. Five admitting possession paid fines of $25 apiece, 11 guilty of being present were fined $5 each and the cases of the remaining four were continued for disposition until July 16.

Signs Mean Nothing to Border Trooper

Cleary, N. Y., July 6 (AP)—There's a state trooper who is skeptical of signs, recently it has been a fad for motorists along the Canadian border to attach placards to their cars reading: "Don't shoot, no liquor." Joseph Bordeadu had one such. A trooper halted his car and looked. Two bottles were seized and Joseph was fined $5 each.

Move for Tax Cut by Congress

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service

Washington, July 6—Strong forces already are at work to bring about tax reduction in the next session of Congress, with a present surplus of $185,000,000 in the treasury and the prospect of continued prosperity, it was disclosed here today.

Although President Coolidge has merely said that tax reduction is a possibility, independent advocates of tax reduction rather than greater retirement of the public debt have begun their campaign to secure reductions denied in the tax slash bill of 1928.

The chief proposals for tax reduction now being made are:

EXCLUSIVE

This is the third chapter of one of the most dramatic tales of the air and sea ever told. It is by Mr. Ramon Franco, commander of the Spanish government expedition which started from Spain for America aboard the Dorner-Wahl flying boat Numancia on June 21, only to meet with disaster near the Azores.

SAYS HENDRYX FELL TO DEATH

New Haven, Ct., July 6 (AP)—Information he has obtained in his inquest into the death of Nathan B. Hendryx, bird cage manufacturer, led Acting Coroner James J. Corrigan today to discard the foul play theory and to hold tentative that Hendryx "suffocated in water," while under the influence of liquor.

The manufacturer's body was found Wednesday night floating near the stern of his yacht, the Nabyx, off Stony Creek.

It was at first believed Hendryx had been thrown overboard, or lost his balance during a fight aboard his yacht, and police worked on that theory.

Baby Zepp Mayflower Cruises Over Boston

Staging a brief but cleverly-handled landing on Technology field today, the Goodyear dirigible Mayflower cruised over Boston today and thrilled thousands of downtown shoppers.

The "baby Zeppelin" aroused much interest as it was momentarily framed in the sky with the Customs House tower as a background. A crowd gathered at the M. I. T. field and watched the "sausage" make its landing with no trouble.

Fighting 26th Arrives at Camp Devens

More than 3000 troops from various sections of the State left on troop trains from the North and South Stations today for Camp Devens, where they went into training for two weeks. The troops that left today are made up entirely of the 26th Division of the Massachusetts National Guard.

They joined more than 4000 other troops who arrived at the Ayer camp Friday. This brought the total number of men to 7000 in camp by nightfall.

Hundreds of wives, sweethearts and friends were gathered at the North Station when the trains pulled out and the soldier boys were given a rousing ovation. Among the National Guard units that entrained today for Devens were the 101st, 102d, 103d and 104th Infantries, 182d and 181st Infantries, 101st Engineers, 101st Field Artillery, 101st Medical Regiment and the 26th Division Train.

Maj. Gen. Alfred F. Foote, commanding general of the 26th Division, who arrived at Devens on Friday, was on hand early to meet the units that left Boston today. Everybody in camp was reported in the best of physical condition.

British Rescuers Honored by Spain

Madrid, July 6 (INS)—The Spanish minister of marine today bestowed naval crosses for merit upon Capt. Lawrence, of the British aircraft carrier Eagle, and other officers from the ship in recognition of their feat in rescuing Maj. Ramon Franco and his three fellow fliers. The Spanish airmen were forced down into the Atlantic while attempting a non-stop flight to New York.

Edmund J. Jolin, Jr., two, her brother, is in a serious condition at the hospital and a sister, Catherine, 10, is suffering from a similar illness.

The two Jolin children at the hospital were reported to be very low and little hope is held out for their recovery.

Dr. George Sullivan, district health officer of the State Department of Public Health, and Frank J. O'Hare, agent of the local board of health, visited the Jolin home today in an effort to learn what food contained the poison. It is thought to have been tomatoes.

The stomach of the dead child has been sent away for analysis.

In Wilmington 18 persons are ill as a result of eating poisoned food, the source of which was being traced.

The stricken persons, scattered through several families, were given emergency treatment by physicians and nurses hurriedly gathered from Woburn and Reading.

Dr. Sullivan reported to Dr. George H. Bigelow, State health commissioner, that the Wilmington sickness was caused by a meal partaken by 18 persons at the home of Angelo Sparatta on Andover rd.

He said all the ill were on the road to recovery today. The meal consisted of macaroni, chicken, mashed potatoes, watermelon and home-made ice cream. Dr. Sullivan said he believed the ice cream to be the cause of the sickness, as the child affected the most scraped the bottom of the freezer.

He told Dr. Sullivan he would examine the family's cows, from whose milk the ice cream was made, and would also investigate the possibility that the freezer was unsanitary.

Probe Sale of Bootleg Liquor to Air Pilots

Mineola, L. I., N. Y., July 6 (INS)—The district attorney's investigation into the airplane crash in which Wilmer Stultz, transatlantic airplane pilot, and two passengers were killed near Roosevelt field, will concern itself principally with the question of the sale of bootleg liquor to airport pilots, it was stated today.

"The district attorney is principally interested in two things," said Asst. Dist. Atty. Philip Huntington Phillips. "First, in obtaining all information possible bearing on the result of the crash. Second, in prosecuting any crime committed. In this case it was the death of Stultz.

"The fact that we do not consider Roosevelt field officials to blame, leaves only the question of whether a public nuisance, that is a speakeasy, was maintained in the vicinity of Roosevelt field.

U. S. Warned France Against Reservations

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN

Washington, July 6—The United States has notified France that any reservations appended to the ratification of her debt to this country, will nullify the Mellon-Berenger agreement.

The movement to make French war payments to the United States depend upon German reparations payments to France has received confirmation of the finance and foreign affairs committees.

The intention of the United States to make French ratification without qualification was conveyed to Ambassador Claudel by Secretary Stimson during the visit of the French ambassador last week, it was learned. At that time Claudel brought the request of his government for a postponement of the maturity date of France's $407,000,000 debt for war supplies purchased after the armistice.

Secretary Stimson couched the position of this government in such terms that French susceptibilities were in no way offended. Nevertheless, he pointed out that previous communications between the two governments on the subject of war debts had already anticipated the matter of French reservations to ratification. Any such reservations, in the viewpoint of this government, are superfluous.

The United States declines to accept the provisions of the Young plan as binding for American international accords, and any French reservation invoking the Young plan will not be taken into account as justifying France's non-payment of her engagements with this Government. If France ratifies the Mellon-Berenger agreement, she will be expected to accept her interest payments whether or not Germany suspends her reparations payments.

If the French Chamber does not ratify the Mellon-Berenger agreement, she will be asked to pay on August 1 the $407,000,000 for the war supplies which falls due on that date.

Revision of earned income provisions designed to cut tax of salaried workers and professional classes, backed by independent forces.

Raising of exemption to incomes of $5000 annually, strongly supported by some Democratic workers and business women's organizations.

Repeal of estate tax, sponsored by American Taxpayers League.

Along with these proposals legitimate theater interests are prepared to urge the entire elimination of the admissions tax.

Other proposals include revision of the individual income brackets to lower the surtaxes on incomes of $18,000 to $70,000 a year. This proposal of the Treasury was accepted by the Senate in the last bill, but rejected by the House.

Business interests are expected to make a drive for a further cut in the corporation income tax on the ground that corporations are the heaviest taxed groups.

Bay State Fugitive Killed in Robbery

Albert Aldridge, who escaped from Massachusetts state prison last May, died in a hospital at Washington, D. C., today from wounds inflicted by Policeman Harry J. McDonald in a gun battle.

McDonald, who is reported dying, was shot through the body by Aldridge after arresting the latter and an unidentified accomplice, following the robbery of a Washington drugstore. Identification of Aldridge was made from fingerprints shortly after his death. He escaped from the state prison at Charlestown on May 9 last after cutting a hole in the cell wall and boring a large number of holes in the roof.

South Dartmouth, July 6—Two British navy fliers will take off from the Round Hill airport within 10 days on an attempted transatlantic flight, Col. E. H. R. Green, owner of the private field, announced today.

He refused to divulge the identities of the aviators, but indicated they were in this country now and merely awaiting completion of "red tape" arrangements with the British government before starting the flight.

U.S. TO PREVENT COUNTERFEITS OF NEW MONEY

Secret Service Maps Details to Protect Public in Issue of 5 Billions in Smaller Notes

Washington, July 6 (INS)—Extraordinary precautions are being taken by the U. S. secret service to guard against counterfeiting of the new government paper currency to be issued to the public July 10.

Lack of familiarity of the public with the new notes would add to the chances of circulating spurious paper, although the abbreviated money, through design, material and distinctive features is regarded as more nearly counterfeit-proof than the present notes.

All details for putting about $5,000,000,000 worth of new money into circulation, have been worked out. Approximately $00,000,000 pieces of old paper money eventually will be replaced by the smaller notes.

All small denominations in Federal Reserve and United States notes will be issued as fast as the reserve banks can get them out, but national bank notes will not be distributed in the new size for several months.

Officials anticipate some hoarding of the new paper for souvenirs. Some of the old paper likewise will be retained by collectors.

GIRL SUES RICH DON FOR BALM

New York, July 6—Don Carlos Augustus Tornel, wealthy Mexican oil operator associated with Edward L. Doheny & Co., has been named defendant in a $100,000 heart balm action brought by Mildred Audrey Bechmann, 21, daughter of A. G. Bechmann, real estate man.

Mildred could not help contrasting his attitude with her own tearful hours spent over Don Carlos' ardent letters to her, a score of which lend a flaming touch to the papers filed in Supreme Court.

Supporting these glowing avowals, Mark Henry Schneider, her attorney, also will present to court Miss Florence Keech, attractive cousin of the plaintiff, who declares she was an eye witness of the Mexican's proposal.

That Miss Keech knows a proposal when she sees or hears one is indicated in her account to Mildred in Babylon, L. I., last August, one of his closest friends was asking Florence to become his bride. Florence consented. Then, a few months later, her fiancee married another girl.

ROMANCE IN CRASH.

It was on Riverside drive that Mildred and her cousin first met Don Carlos and his friend in May, 1928. His auto brushed against Mildred's and he didn't even stop to learn if any damage had been done.

She angrily pursued and forced him to the curb. But his gallantry disarmed her. Instead of she taking him to a police station, he took her to dinner. As they proceeded, it is alleged, came two months later. Mildred temporized, but in August she consented.

HE SLIPS HOME

Then Don Carlos went to Venezuela in November to buy oil properties for Doheny. While the Don "shivered and burned" with a fever and tropical, Mildred shopped along Fifth ave. for a trousseau.

Before Don Carlos returned to New York last May, so Mildred's papers set forth, he wrote her:

"Tell me, dear, that we shall never drift apart again, and that you shall go wherever I go, and that you shall follow me through fire and water, through heaven and hell. I live only with the hope that very soon I shall be with you again and that I shall again burn with your caresses and kisses.

"Your kiss which will last forever and ever and ever, and will burn us with flames of love. You see all that is lovely and light. I am weary with dreams of you, dreaming day and night of that moment when I shall give you that kiss!"

Nab Roxbury Youth as Check Forger

The Suffolk County grand jury returned indictments chargin larceny and forgery of checks against James P. McGowan, 18, of 27 Newburg st., Roxbury.

McGowan was arrested by police inspectors, May 29, at the Bank of Commerce and Trust Co., 21 Milk st., while he was attempting, according to the police, to have certified a check alleged to have been signed by Dr. Percy E. Davidson of 479 Beacon st., Boston, to the value of $184.50.

Two Men Slugged in Brooklyn, One Dead

New York, July 6 (INS)—A man believed to be Henry Jackie, 60, was found murdered today in Brooklyn. There was a deep gash in the back of his head. About a mile away, also in Brenan, a laborer, was found unconscious—a similar gash on his head.

On Tuesday William Callahan, 54, was found lying on a sidewalk with a gash on his head. Detectives remembered that three years ago the "Williamsburg Grinner," a all man with a demoniacal laugh apparently a madman—lugged 20 men in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn and never was caught.

HARVARD MEN GIVEN FINES

Two Harvard students, volunteer counsellors at the St. Paul's School camp at Danbury, N. H., were arraigned in police court at Franklin, N. H., today as a result of their celebration of the Fourth.

Stanley Swain, of Needham, was found guilty on a charge of disorderly conduct and fined $10 and costs of $25 for damaging a United States mail box.

Lamar Soutter of Brookline, was fined $50 and costs of $25 for illegal possession of liquor. Both men are bound over to the October term of the Federal court for damaging a mail box and its contents.

Police charged that Swain placed firecrackers in a mail box at Franklin on the night before the Fourth, damaging both the box and its contents. As there is no state law in New Hampshire to punish such an offense, a charge of disorderly conduct was made. Deputy U. S. Marshal N. F. Bean brought both men in to Concord where they were bound over to the federal court by the U. S. commissioner.

Dennis Sullivan, mayor and city solicitor of Franklin, prosecuted the students, who were defended by former County Solicitor Herbert Rainie.

Hat on at Anthem, Youth Is Fined $10

East Orange, N. J., July 6 (INS)—Melvin Hill, 18, and George Koch, 20, of Maplewood, were arraigned for failing to uncover at Elmwood playground while a band played "The Star Spangled Banner," as a part of the Fourth of July celebration.

Hill appeared contrite and was discharged when arraigned, but Koch was fined $10.

'ANTI-GRINGO' SPEECH STIRS MEXICANS

Mexico City, July 6 (AP)—An anti-American, "anti-Gringo" speech was made here by Jose Vasconcelos in accepting the nomination of the anti-reelectionist party for the Mexican presidency, in the November elections.

If the people's will does not triumph in November, he declared, the elections will amount to a mere formula for the selection of the person best suited to the United States "such as happened in Nicaragua. Water power and other natural resources, the mines and agricultural property will then all pass into the hands of foreigners.

"Mexico has less liberty than an imperial colony," he said.

He declared that for 18 years a wave of corruption has engulfed the country and that the people were penniless because officials have lived in luxury, squandering public funds. National autonomy has been limited by perpetual tyranny, he said, adding that Mexico is the unhappiest country in America, the poorest and the least educated because the government has destroyed industry and commerce and killed all initiative.

Vasconcelos was minister of public instruction in the Obregon administration. His nomination was unanimous. As he started to speak the delegates cheered him and threw flowers at him.

MOBS BURN 4 CARS IN STRIKE

New Orleans, July 6 (AP)—Three street cars were burned at the Canal st. barn early today in addition to one destroyed at the foot of Canal st. yesterday.

Other cars sent out on the lines were demolished by rocks before the City Council instructed that all attempts at operating cars be halted during the carmen's strike.

Police riot guns, tear bombs and high pressure streams of water were used to quell disturbance and interrupt the almost continuous stoning of railway premises by union sympathizers in the crowd of several thousand. Police warned the union men that they would take their lives in their hands if they sought to force entrance into the barns.

GENERAL STRIKE LOOMS

The City Council had before it today threats to call out the building and metal trades councils members in sympathy with the strikes.

"We are not going to stand for public service importing strike-breakers," declared William Ruth, president of the Trades Union Council in his challenge to the City Council.

The strike up to today has claimed its toll of two dead and hundreds injured in addition to destruction of property.

The strike which July 1 over renewal of a three-year contract and grew to menacing proportions with an attempt by the Public Service Corporation to operate armed street cars with crews of strike breakers in defiance of the contract denied it a voice in arbitration of suspensions and discharges.

TRAINLOAD VANISH.

The City Commission Council stepped in today to seek negotiations between the railway company and the 1500 or more striking union workmen and offered to mediate.

What became of a special train of six cars of imported workmen the Public Service brought into the outskirts of the city last night remained a mystery.

It was believed they were unloaded at the car barns, a moving location to be spirited into the carbarns in order to avoid a brickbat welcome prepared for their arrival by a howling mob that congregated at the Canal st. carbarns and staged all-night demonstrations.

Says Men Do Not Love Feminine Highbrows

Paris, July 6 (INS)—Intelligent men will admire the feminine "highbrow," but will not love her nor want to marry her.

This opinion is advanced by the noted French publicist, Marcel Prevost.

The whole argument was precipitated by the famous feminist leader, Mme. Henriette Chandet, who wrote an article for the newspaper Intransigeant around the query:

"Does a man like a woman highbrow?"

Prevost wrote: "Intelligent men will admire her, but never love her. They look upon an intellectual woman a little in the manner of a special class of men. Their feeling will spell admiration, jealousy or disdain.

"Unintelligent men have a frightful fear of the feminine highbrow, although they, too, admire her secretly."

Andre Maurois, another celebrated writer of the younger school, believes an intelligent woman may exercise a liberal profession and pursue an important career without losing feminine charm. He adds:

"Nevertheless, woman does interest man because he does not understand her. Little by little as she becomes his equal in the professional order of things, she loses this attraction and subsequently loses favor in masculine eyes."

WRITES PARKER ON SUSPENSION OF LICENSE

Asserts He Was Standing on the Wing of Plane to Let His Motor Cool Off

Capt. Richard W. Mackie, divisional superintendent of Colonial Air Transport and holder of the first pilot's license issued in Massachusetts, today branded as unfair the present system of governing aviators in this State.

Capt. Mackie's license was suspended for five days on the charge of leaving his motor running at Boston airport.

In a letter to Registrar of Motor Vehicles Parker he declared aviators should be given hearings before competent authorities, and charged that flying activities in Massachusetts are too vast for one man to administer.

In his letter Capt. Mackie said his license was suspended, while he was in New York, on charges of leaving his plane with motor running and operating dangerously near a crowd.

The second charge, he said, was withdrawn when it was revealed that lax administration of the airport allowed the crowd to surge beyond restraining ropes onto the flying field when he descended after looping his ship for two hours. On the first charge he said he could have established by competent witnesses had he been granted a hearing, that he was standing on the wing of the plane while the motor was cooling off.

He charges the registrar's office with giving out misleading publicity regarding his case, and intimating his suspension was permanent. Also the registrar's office, according to Capt. Mackie, did not made known the fact that he holds license number A-1, the first issued in the state.

"In the follow-up publicity after my license was reinstated," he added, "it was said I had been grounded for indulgence in loops. This was of course utterly false."

He concluded by asking the same treatment for aviators as is given motorists.

WILSON FACES DEATH CHARGE

Johnny Wilson, former middleweight champion, once of Charlestown, may face serious charges in connection with the slaying of his former manager, Frank Marlow, unless he consents to "open up." This was indicated by police today.

Grilled for hours by New York detectives Wilson claimed to know no more than he has already told. New York police, however, believe, after piecing all the information they have gathered together, that the former Boston fighter holds the key to the solution of the slaying. "Danny Murray," a new name injected into the case by the grilling of Wilson, is being sought by the police.

Wilson informed police that a bookmaker by that name had approached the table where he was dining with the racketeer shortly before he was "taken for a ride," and had some talk with him about race track bets.

Police brought in a man known to followers of the racket as "Danny Murray." The real name of this man is Dominic Piccoro. He readily admitted to police he was a bookmaker at the Acqueduct track for ten years. He denied knowing either Marlow or Wilson.

When confronted with Wilson at police headquarters neither showed any sign of recognition, and Wilson stated that he was not the "Danny Murray" he meant.

Auto Crash Injuries Fatal to Pugilist

Marvis Davis, 24, of 63 Ruggles st., Quincy, driver of one of two motor trucks in collision on Neponset ave., suffering a broken back and internal injuries, died at City Hospital last night. Funeral services will be held at his home tomorrow at 1 p. m.

Davis was driving a truck owned by Thomas J. Dolan of North Weymouth. Gerald J. Simpson of 654 Tremont st., South End, driver of the other truck, a much heavier vehicle, escaped serious injury. Davis was a well-known heavyweight boxer.

2 Prisoners End Lives in Cells

John R. Allen, 31, of 36 Lothrop st., Brighton, strangled himself in a bathroom in the police station, using a small web belt tied to an overhead cross bar in his cell. He was sitting quietly in his cell. Fifteen minutes later his body was found.

A man, who gave his name as Frank J. Ryan, 36, of 344 East Fifth st., South Boston, hanged himself in his cell at the Atlantic st. station. He used his shirt as a rope.

Canadian Rum Kills Tourist on Spree

Toronto, July 6—Stewart McLenaghan, acting chairman of the Ontario liquor control board, said that there would be an immediate inquiry into the sale of liquor to a party of three American tourists traveling east through Ontario, one of whom, John Matonsek, was found dead later in the rear seat of the car they were driving.

It was testified at the inquest at Gananoque, that the party had bought government liquor at Ottawa, again at Port Hope and a third time at another town east of Port Hope.

The jury found Matonsek died of alcoholic poisoning.

"What about the statement of doctors that the man died from alcoholic poisoning?" he was asked. Could there be anything wrong with the liquor they got? McLenaghan inclined to the view that it was the quantity, rather than the quality that led to the death of the Chicago man.

Liquor vendors are instructed to limit traveling tourists to two bottles. The one in question will be asked to explain.

Malden House Fired Twice in Month

For the second time in a month, police early today found the vacant house at 384 Medford st., Malden, set on fire, presumably by boys.

Two separate fires were going in the cellar rubbish when firemen arrived last night, and although little damage was done, a fire of the same suspicious origin did considerable damage less than a month ago there.

Boston Spice Firm Are in Trade Pact

Washington, July 6—Three Boston concerns are parties to a trade practice agreement signed under the auspices of the federal trade commission here today to prohibit the practice of "slack filling" in the spice grinding and packing industry.

The Boston concerns are the Joseph Burnett Co., the D. & L. Slade Co. and Stickney and Poor Spice Co. All were represented at the meeting in New York city last week at which the agreement was drawn up.

FARRELL FACES COURT TODAY

Joseph A. Farrell of California st., West Newton, ex-agent for the Watch and Ward Society indicted in connection with attacks on two women, will be given a hearing today.

Farrell was identified by Mary Farmarian of the Back Bay as the man who attacked her in a lonely section of Weston.

Farrell is charged in two indictments with assault with intent to commit a serious offence. Miss Farmanian, who identified Farrell, was a victim of a vicious assault. The other victim of a similar assault was Alice Groden, 22, a Cambridge school teacher.

Man Drops Dead; Body Unidentified

As he was walking along Tremont st. near Dover st., South End, an unidentified man dropped dead on the sidewalk. He was removed to the Southern Mortuary. He is described as about 55 years, five feet eight inches in height, slight build, blue eyes, light hair mixed with gray, sandy mustache, wearing a blue suit with red and white stripes.

Endurance Fliers Come Back to Earth

Roy Mitchell and Byron Newcomb who set new endurance flight record, as they appeared after landing at Cleveland Airport with Mrs. Newcomb, Eddie Stinson, builder of the plane, and Ernest Dasham, refueling pilot. They are surrounded by a crowd of 75,000 enthusiasts who stayed up all night to see them land. (Associated Press telephoto over A. T. & T. wire.

ONE KILLED IN RUSH TO SEE FLIERS LAND

Mob of 75,000 Overruns the Field as the Airmen Come Down After 174 Hours

Cleveland, July 6—Holders of a new world's record for endurance flights of 174 hours and 59 seconds Roy J. Mitchell and Byron K. Newcomb today rested their wearied bodies after remaining in the air from a week ago Friday afternoon until 12:39:50 this morning, when they brought their plane to earth at Cleveland airport.

They exceeded by 1 hour 28 minutes and 58 seconds the old mark set recently in Fort Worth, Texas, by Reginald Robbins and James Kelley, who remained aloft 172 hours 32 minutes and 1 second.

A crowd of 75,000 people charged the police, swept them away and overran the field in an effort to reach the fliers when the plane touched ground. In this rush one boy climbed onto an electric car and was electrocuted.

The mob fought to get near the fliers who were rushed away to the office and the crowd fell upon the plane to get souvenirs, but it was saved from serious damage.

ROADS ARE JAMMED.

The roads were jammed with autos for miles around the airport. The crowd found the worst traffic jam of the city's history blocking egress from the field. Motorists spent hours near the airport, hopelessly tangled in traffic snarls, unable to thread a way through the maze of automobiles, and frequently mired in the mud. Traffic lanes were demoralized. Crowding, pushing and jockeying for progress by inches, motorists were caught in a blockade lasting all night. Some settled themselves for sleep. There was no way for them to leave, so they stayed.

Daybreak the streams of automobiles nudging their way toward home still issued from the area around the field.

FLIERS WORN OUT

Weariness brought the airmen to a landing after a flight which became more hazardous and difficult as the days aloft cut down their physical endurance.

The climax of the attempt came but a few hours before it ended, and the two men said it nearly killed them. They survived a severe electrical storm which damaged their refueling plane in a hard landing and stopped all other air traffic to flight on for the record, attained 12 hours later.

Exhausted, the airmen immediately were taken under guard to a hotel, to sleep throughout the day if they desire. They were spent. "We broke the record. That's enough. All we want now is sleep," Newcomb said.

Resting with them was Ernest Basham, pilot of the refueling plane, who completed 24 contacts during the flight to replenish the supply of gasoline, oil and food.

AIRPORT IS CROWDED.

Roads were jammed for miles, and the airport was crowded with visitors when the record was equalled shortly before midnight. The crowd increased as the Stinson-Detroiter monoplane, City of Cleveland, rode through the darkness, concealed in the murky atmosphere high above the airport.

The waiting crowd watched anxiously as the new hour passed, and five feet eight inches in height, the record was set at 12:10:52. Rockets and flares were released in salute to the airmen, a display of fireworks added to the brilliance of lights at the field.

A little later the cruising lights of the ship appeared as the pilots dropped from the altitude of 500 feet which they had held early in the night.

THEN THE CROWD CHARGED

Twinkling against the darkness the lights swung about the aircraft, straightened out to the east and then climbed again.

Thinking that the flight was to continue, the crowd tried to disperse but few had left their places at 12:37 when a red flare, the signal of a landing, was dropped from the plane.

Less than 10 minutes later the wheels touched earth. Then the crowd charged. Police were helpless, the field was overrun, and it was during this rush that Steve Kusko, 16, lost his life. He climbed to a vantage point atop an electric interurban car and was electrocuted. Unknowing, the crowd surged, and as the pilots swung the ship around hundreds crowded the ship, hanging to the wings and tail as it was taxied to the hangar of the Stewart Aircraft Corporation, backers of the flight.

SEEK PLANE SOUVENIRS

Mitchell and Newcomb rose smiling from their seats and stepped out. Again the mob fought to get near the fliers. They were hurried into the company's offices inside the hangar and many of those unable to follow fell upon the plane, tearing at it with their hands as they sought souvenirs. It was not seriously damaged, however.

Once inside the office, the men said they were tired out, that they had broken the record and that they saw no reason for trying to better against the weariness which tortured them. They praised the performance of their engine and plane, and declared that their motor would have functioned indefinitely.

Basham wrecked a refueling plane in an electrical storm Thursday night after a hazardous contact. He made a forced landing by lighting flashes, and dashed in the motor against a railroad embankment, but he and his crew, Dale Dryer and James Hayden, were unhurt. The fliers said it was the worst period of the flight. Rain fell until daybreak.

Battling With Death

FEAR METHUEN MAN SLAIN

Methuen, July 6—The bloodstained automobile of James Tomachio, 22, of 26 Merilins ave., this town, with its owner missing, was found today in the Merrimac river.

In the belief that Tomachio may have been a victim of foul play, local police at the suggestion of State Detective Richard Griffin, who is working on the case, planned to drag the river.

The automobile, a sedan, was discovered by Louis Zieba, 15, of 2 Porter ave., about 20 feet off the foot of Merilins ave. At that point the water was low and the registration plates of the machine were visible.

Zieba took the number and noticed the back window of the car was blood-stained, he told the police.

When officers arrived the machine had sunk in the muddy bottom of the river until only the top was above water, but Samuel Chiarenza of Vermont ave. dove and managed to open two doors. He made his way into the sedan under water, reporting that the machine was unoccupied, but that the windshield in front of the driver's seat was bloodstained. The stains on the rear window had been washed off by the water.

The current at this point runs slowly, and police believe that if Tomachio managed to escape from the car after it reached the river, only to collapse in the water from injuries, his body is nearby.

Garage men were summoned by the police and the submerged machine was lifted from its resting place and hauled ashore.

The car had gone off the end of Merilins ave., dropping six or eight feet to a shelf, from which it had shot down 25 feet to the river.

Police believe that Tomachio was either fatally hurt in the drop or that he had previously been wounded and lost control of his car while trying to reach his home.

The possibility that bootleggers may have had some knowledge of the affair was being considered by the police.

Gunman Is Shot in Killing Reprisal

Chicago, July 6 (AP)—George Marne, South Side saloonkeeper, gunman and convicted killer, was wounded three times by an unidentified man at 64th st. and Cottage Grove ave.

Police see in the shooting a reprisal attempt for the slaying last Dec. 23 of Hugh "Tubby" McGovern and William "Gunner" McFadden, who were killed in a pistol battle with Marne in the Granada Cafe.

Driver Escapes as Car Overturns

Joseph Comeau of Juliet st., Andover, had a narrow escape from death today when the car which he was driving skidded on the car tracks at Main and Wedgemere sts., Malden, and turned over.

Italian Scholar Dies While Bathing

Venice, Italy, July 6 (AP)—The secret of Etruria's lost language was carried to the tomb today by Professor Alfredo Trombetti, who died of a heart attack while bathing off Lido.

Last April the professor, most famous of Italy's linguistic scholars, announced he was at last about to penetrate the veil of mystery which had shrouded the Etruscan tongue.

3 BLACKJACK CASHIER AND ROB BANK

Dauphin, Pa., July 6 (AP)—Three men robbed the Dauphin National Bank today after blackjacking Cashier Harold F. Cobaugh as he was opening the bank for business.

The three robbers escaped in a coupe and State police and other officers threw a cordon through the mountains in upper Dauphin County in an effort to block all exits from this section.

Cobaugh, who was knocked unconscious from the blow, recovered soon after the men left the bank and, seizing his revolver, started in pursuit of their car, firing as he ran.

The sound of Cobaugh's shots aroused the community. It is believed, police said, that the robbers' car turned from the main highway at Hackton and headed toward the mountains between this town and Harrisburg.

Bank officials said they did not believe the theft would total more than $2500.

$2000 Beauty Shop Fire in Somerville

HOMEMAKERS END SESSION

Miss Margaret M. Justin, dean of Kansas State Agricultural College, was re-elected president of the American Home Economics Association, at the closing session of a five-day convention of the association, held at the Hotel Statler. Except for one vice-president, all present officers of the association were re-elected. The new vice-president is Mrs. Kate Kinyon of Denver. She succeeds Miss Agnes E. Harris of the University of Alabama.

Miss Alice Branegan of the State College, Bozeman, Mont., was chosen a councilor-at-large, taking the place of Dr. Alice F. Blood of Simmons College, whose term expires. Two new members were added to the executive committee, Mrs. Chase G. Woodhouse of North Carolina State College, and Miss Cora Winchell of Teachers' College, Columbia University.

An international luncheon was attended by representatives or delegates from New Zealand, Switzerland, Sweden, Porto Rico, Alaska and Canada.

The invitation, it was made known, is to be given a place in the program of child welfare promotion undertaken by President Hoover. The next annual meeting of the association, according to a vote taken, will be held in Denver, the week of June 23.

Bishop Buys Land for New Church Site

Blackstone, July 6—More than an acre of land has been purchased here at the corner of Carter ave. and Rathbun st., by Bishop O'Leary of the Springfield diocese as the site for a Catholic church to be erected soon. The church will be named after St. Theresa.

Bishop O'Leary has appointed Rev. Hermann Nemetz to the pastorate. The first mass in the district of the new parish will be celebrated tomorrow morning at seven o'clock at Edgewater drive, in a building owned by Fabian Jodoin, which will be used temporarily.

The new parish includes all the Catholic families in the Millerville and East Blackstone sections, and up to the present have been parishioners of St. Paul's parish of this town.

Engine Whistles Rile Ayer People

Shrill whistles of Boston & Maine locomotives as they pass between Sandy Pond Crossing and Main st. bridge, Ayer, are considered a public nuisance by 33 residents of the town, headed by Mrs. Mary A. Hodgman. They have petitioned the State department of public utilities that it be prohibited. A hearing on the petition will be held by the department at the State House on Monday, July 22, at 2:15 p. m.

Another petition filed with the department by 48 Andover commuters, requests that an order be issued to require the Boston & Maine to stop the 11:20 express from Boston to South Lawrence at Andover on Saturdays only.

BLAMES POLICE FOR DROWNING

The charge that metropolitan police were responsible for the drowning of Frank Cassidy, 22, of River st., West Newton, during canoe races in Charles River Basin July 4, was made at a meeting of the Omi Cron Delta Canoe Club of Waltham.

A committee of five was appointed to investigate. The club voted to demand a hearing by the Metropolitan District Commission.

Cassidy was drowned when he and eight other members of the Omi Cron Delta Canoe Club were tossed into the water as their war canoe upset after being bumped by the police boat.

Belgian Editor Dies From Burns

Livingston, Mont., July 6—Georges Landroy, editor of Le Matin newspaper at Antwerp, Belgium, died from burns from the spray of Castle Geyser in Yellowstone National park.

Landroy, a member of the European party of journalists touring this country, was waiting for giant geyser to play near the old Faithful Inn. Castle Geyser spouted suddenly and covered his body with boiling water before he could get out of the spray.

Charge Plot in Big Liquor Theft

Chicago, July 6—Looting of the Sibley warehouse of $2,000,000 of prewar whiskey may be traced to warehouse employes in conspiracy with bootleggers, government officials said.

The officials, who asked that their names be withheld, declared Prohibition Administrator E. C. Yellowley's inquiry had failed to involve prohibition agents, inspectors or other government employes. The inquiry, under way since last fall, has shown that 482 barrels and 1353 cases of whiskey were tampered with and replaced with colored water.

Four Children Seek Father, Gone a Week

Children of Angelo Torchetti, 27 Sheridan st., Malden, have asked the police to locate their father, who disappeared from home Saturday after leaving two notes to his children and a friend saying he was discouraged and was going away.

Torchetti is a widower with four children and came here from Glens Falls, N. Y., 10 years ago. He is 43 years old, 5 feet 7 inches in height, of smooth complexion, and has a prominent scar on the back of his neck.

Honolulu, T. H., July 6 (INS)—Lawrence M. Judd today began his official duties as Governor of the territory of Hawaii, succeeding Governor Farrington.

This Fighter Played Double Role — in Army and Navy

Washington, July 6 (AP)—A search of War Department files has disclosed the record of a person who, during his career, held high ranks in both the army and navy.

"Maj.-Gen. Isaac Admiral Samuel Fowhatan Carter was born in Carter County, Tenn., Aug. 6, 1818. As a naval officer he served in the Mexican War, participating with the Asiatic squadron in the Canton river.

He served during the Civil War, first acting as brigadier-general, holding the rank of major-general. He returned to naval duty and became commandant of the Naval Academy and was promoted to rear admiral on the retired list May 16, 1883. He died in Washington, May 26, 1891.

PROMOTIONS OF POLICE HELD UP

Promotions to advanced grades for lieutenants, sergeants and patrolmen and the wholesale transfer of men in the Boston police department, which was expected, failed to materialize. Commissioner Wilson said he had not yet decided on the men to be advanced or the changes to be made, and that he could not set a definite date for a general order to that effect.

It is believed, however, that the order will come during the ensuing week. A number of the stations are running short-handed of sergeants, while a lieutenant has been acting head of station 11 since the death of Capt. Matthew Dailey. It is also expected that a number of officers will be assigned to the Boston traffic commission, but their entire quota will not be supplied for some time.

Woman Jailed for Jealous Assault

Florence Moody of Bradford st., was sentenced to three months in Charles st. jail by Judge Zottoli in the municipal court for threatening and assaulting Lillian Lee, a social worker, Mrs. Lee's headquarters are at the South End Wayside Army in Dover st.

The story told Judge Zottoli was that Mrs. Lee is a divorcee and she found that her ex-husband, who is behind in his alimony, was stopping at Mrs. Moody's home in Bradford st. When she visited the house to inquire about the alimony, the two women argued and Mrs. Lee was chased out of the house. When she took refuge in a store it is charged Mrs. Moody followed her there and threatened to kill her. Mrs. Moody appealed.

Pierce Named for Davis Foundation

Brockton, July 6—Announcement was made by the Pilgrim Foundation, a $1,000,000 organization founded two years ago by Edgar B. Davis for the benefit of the poor people, that Benjamin F. Pierce, formerly general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., has been elected a director, to succeed the late Charles P. Holland.

John P. Meade, state deputy commissioner of labor, who is a director, has also been elected a trustee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Holland.

Treasure Hunt

As a special feature for tomorrow, and again on Sunday, July 14, Paragon Park, at Nantasket, will stage a "Treasure Hunt." It will be a quest of El Dorado, literally, for the hunt will be for real gold. On each day the management will hide in places within the park $500 in gold pieces of various denominations—$2.50, $5 and $10.

AIR PARADE AT NORTHAMPTON TODAY

Northampton, July 6—Several more pilots are expected here today to join in the air parade scheduled in the celebration of the 275th anniversary of the settlement of Northampton. A group of three Marine Corps pursuit planes were the latest arrivals, zooming over the Mt. Tom airport and giving an impromptu exhibition of stunts that held the attention of pedestrians all over the city.

The flyers, Capt. James T. Moore, Lieut. Hayne D. Boyden and Lieut. William R. Hughes, were not allowed to land, as the airport is not officially recorded with the government, but they circled overhead for 15 minutes or more, diving and looping, and finished off with a half dozen cartwheel loops.

Before heading toward White River Junction, Lieut. Hughes swooped low over the field and dropped a note to Lieut. Harlan F. Banks, director of the local meet, expressing regret that the Marine trio could not land, but adding "You know how it is," and promising to return this morning at 11 o'clock for some more aerial acrobatics.

James J. Janelli, chairman of the American Legion Committee in charge of the meet, said that efforts would be made to secure a Curtiss flying service passenger plane to replace the Mohawk Airways Ford trimotored ship, which left for Oneonta, N. Y.

Ohio Wesleyan Picks Stetson of Harvard

Delaware, O., July 6 (AP)—Dr. Harlan True Stetson, assistant professor of astronomy at Harvard University, has been appointed head of the department of astronomy and director of Perkins Observatory at Ohio Wesleyan University. Dr. Stetson, who recently returned from an astronomical expedition to the Malay peninsula for observation of the total solar eclipse on May 9, has been a member of the Harvard faculty for 13 years. He has also taught at Dartmouth, Middlebury and Northwestern University.

ARMED TROOPS HUNT SLAYER

Booneville, Miss., July 6 (AP)—National Guardsmen equipped with machine guns and rifles joined the search here today for DeWitt Geno, who disappeared after the killing Thursday of his brother-in-law, Army Jumper.

The troops were picked from three companies upon orders of Governor Theodore G. Bilbo, commanded by officers from Jackson.

Geno escaped from the jail here recently and had dodged officers hunting him for trial on another murder charge. The sheriff was told he appeared at a holiday party at his father's home and shot Jumper.

Saved From Deportation

Atherley Winner in King's Cup Race

London, July 6 (AP)—Flight Lieut. Atherley, member of the British Schneider cup team, won the King's cup air race today in the 1169-mile flight around Britain.

Flier Sets Canadian Altitude Record

Montreal, Que., July 6 (INS)—Flying under favorable conditions, Capt. J. E. Parkinson, special pilot, established a new official Canadian altitude record here when he flew his Curtis "Robin Cabin" monoplane to a height of 20,000 feet.

"MIRACLE WORKER IN MODERNIZING TURKEY," Dr. Archibald Henderson describes the amazing personality of Kemal Pasha, outstanding figure in the development of his nation, in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

BROTHER SAVES SISTER FROM DEPORTATION

Just after Judge Arthur B. Stone had sentenced her to the poor house at Tewksbury to await deportation after she was found guilty of vagrancy in East Cambridge Court today, Mary Kirrane, 18-year-old colleen who has been in the country only nine months, was saved by the timely arrival of her brother, Thomas.

Mary was arrested in Arlington on July 2 by Patrolman Scannell who found her wandering about the streets at an early hour. Having no home and without funds, she was charged with vagrancy.

From her story, it was learned that she had worked as a domestic in several homes. Recently she lost her place and when she was unable to pay her room rent, was forced to quit her boarding house.

Although she has three brothers living in this country Miss Kirrane did not communicate with them. She accepted Judge Stone's decision in silence, and but for the arrival of her brother, the sentence of the court would have been carried out.

Thomas assured the court that his sister would be taken care of, and Judge Stone then sentenced her to the Women's Reformatory at Framingham. Heartened by the presence of her brother, Mary appealed and was held in $2000 for the Superior Court.

Horneman to Seat War Vets' Officers

New officers of the State Veterans of Foreign Wars will be installed in Convention Hall, Saturday night, July 20, by Past Commander William C. Horneman and the degree team of George Dilboy Post of Somerville.

Spanish Fliers Fought to Keep Plane Fr om Capsizing

nants of our afternoon meal, having still the untouched emergency supply we carried with us.

It is now dawn on the 23rd. Everything on board is just the same. We managed to arrange our radio receiver in the morning and this afternoon we are able to do just a little working with our transmitter, but we got very little range. We hope that by transmitting during the night, we will be able to enlarge our reach and summon aid.

We have a thermos bottle with cold coffee, and four tins of condensed milk, each tin containing about four litres. With this food, we have our breakfast, which we treat over the spirit stove that we carried on board.

The wind diminished, and the battering seas let up a bit.

Our tobacco supply was gone, but I remember that in one of the pockets of my dungarees, I have six 30-cent cigars from the Canary Islands. These cigars are very good, indeed.

My dungarees have been used as a pillow by Gallarza; therefore the cigars were all broken. Nevertheless, we smoked one a day, passing it around among the four of us, the same way as the Moors smoke their Kaif pipes.

This smoking time was the best part of the day, and we were even happy then, although we were sometimes worried about the anxious moments which our families were going through, believing us eaten by some shark.

In the morning of the 23rd we were visited by a sea bird, a little larger than a swallow, but still very much like one. It flew very well, and often came to the water, which made us think land was near, but when at mid-day we checked our position, we found ourselves very near the place at which we had landed and where we took off again on the previous day—more than 100 miles from Fayal, and out of the ordinary track of ships, still without any possibility of our feeble radio being heard.

RATION FOOD

On the same morning our water supply gave out. With all kinds of visible consternation among us we decided to use the water from the radiator. We prepared a filter with the gasoline funnel and cotton, and upon opening the water-cock, the water appears to be very clean and quite palatable. This day—the 23d, of all days—appeared to be a very lucky one, despite our superstition that the number 23 means "Skiddoo."

Through our efforts with the improvised water main barrel, and the draining of the radiators, we now have 130 litres of fine water. Our radio is working, and the wind is from the northwest. Thus we are not being driven much away from the archipelago, but toward the eastern part of the group—the islands of Ons Miguel and Santa Maria.

We began to imagine our stay at sea was to be a long one, and decided the food we have taken for eight days had to be rationed out in order to last us 15 or 20 days. It is an easy matter disposing of water, which always diminishes that feeling of hunger and is somewhat nutritive.

We discussed the matter of radio signals once more. If we transmit the call C Q (General Attention), somebody would listen in, and then the continued working of different stations would not allow our feeble signals to be heard.

SOS UNANSWERED

Why not send the classical SOS signal, we asked ourselves? Then all the steamers would repeat the signals and all the world would hear us, and know our position and come to our rescue. But we thought it unwarrantable to use the SOS without being in real danger, and until now, after we sent this call, it ceased to worry us.

Asking for help without being actually in danger is not punishable by law, but our conscience refused to do this. We therefore sent the following: Send an SOS, giving our situation, and asking for gasoline to enable us to keep off and arrive at the Azores in order to continue our voyage, stating our machine is still in very good condition.

Moments of great emotion followed. The radio working power in our aerial is eight amperes, more than we expect. We send out our signal. Gallarza is the sender and I take charge of the receiver, which I have on the deck to work more freely. Gallarza sends the message in Spanish:

"SOS—SOS—SOS—SOS—Numancia esta 100 millas sudeste de Fayal. Necesitamos 600 litros de cumbustibles."

He repeated this in English:

"SOS—SOS — SOS—SOS— The Numancia is 100 miles southwest of Fayal. We require 600 litres of gasoline."

We await an answer. Nobody repeats our SOS. We have not been heard.

HEAR SHIP MESSAGES

I pick up part of a message transmitte' by the British merchantman Greidon, which mentions the noise and an aeroplane, and gives the position of the noise to the east of Santa Marie island, and on almost the same latitude Gallarin had indicated in our S O S.

We are now confused, but the result is that nobody has picked up our signals. We repeat the message, with the same result—or rather, lack of it. Our apparatus has less range than a "moesin de Almusdano" (Moor that sings in the tower of the church).

Meanwhile, we heard a hundred stations and ships communicating ordinary commercial air messages with a sonorous rhythm, all compitely indifferent to those four souls which are at the mercy of the wind and the waves.

If, by chance, I am again given permission to make any sort of flight, I will carry a radio strong enough to be envied by even the ship—that's on my word of honor.

On that same morning, we counted out our food supply, and rationed it for 20 days.

Our fish cakes have suffered so much that they are almost inedible, even for the very hungry man. We throw them to the fishes, except for a few pieces which are still good. We never touch them. Our food supply consisted of:

Twenty-four eggs, hard boiled, and in their natural state; 500 grams of ham; 700 grams of sausag; 1 small cold tongue; 24 bananas (much spoiled); 4 pounds chocolate, and coffee supplies for 2 days; 3½ tins of condensed milk; 2 tins of fruit jam; 100 grams of cheese; 5 litres of medicinal concentrated food called ceregumil (a fine thing to be taken with water); 5 tins of English water-biscuits (our daily bread).

THEIR DAILY MEALS

With this supply we made the following distribution: Breakfast —coffee or chocolate, with milk or water, for 15 days (very small breakfast, indeed) and three biscuits each. One heavy-course in each meal consisting of one egg, or one small piece of sausage, tongue or ham; dessert in each meal being a small piece of cheese, chocolate, banana or bit of jam, and four or six biscuits per meal.

What we ate every day was less than the usual piece of cold meat they give with a Vermouth in the Madrid coffee houses.

"We also had oneand a half bottles of white wine, a half-bottle of brandy and one of rum and one of champagne—we had intended to uncork the champagne under the statue of Liberty in New York Harbor.

Our first meal of the 23d of June arrived at the regular time, and distributing the egg and banana, we realized this was our principal course, and we all engaged in protests—feeling so entitled, as our hunger was really strong.

When night came, we distributed the slice of sausage and an almost transparent slice of cheese. We had started on our economic regime—except that every now and then Ruiz de Alda begged another biscuit.

With the second meal, we had a drop of wine, and when this gave out, we had brandy or rum. If the night were cold, the one on watch was given an extra drop or two. We kept the champagne in case one of us fell ill.

MECHANIC ILL

In this regime of economy the latter persons had the advantage of using their own fat in case the food gave out, whereas the thin, who had no fat, suffered the more from under-nutrition. The fat persons were Ruiz de Alda and myself. Gallarza is neither fat nor thin, while the mechanic, Madariaga, could not be considered too thin, either.

We all kept up very well with the exception of Madariaga, who on the 26th, was feeling the effects severely, and would scarcely get up. Surely, had we been many more days without help, we would have had to consider his condition, since he had been injured when the tools fell on him just before we took off from Spain.

As the gasoline for the radio generator was getting lower, on the 24th, we decided to do without a hot breakfast so as not to use the fuel in the spirit stove. From this day on, we anxiously saw our supply getting lower and lower. On the 24th, our coffee gave out; on the 27th, the milk, cheese and bananas. On the 28th, the eggs were finished, and on the 29th, we had ham left for only another day. The brandy and wine were finished and the rum that was left was negligible.

On the night of the 23d, the wind shifted to the west and at dawn on the 24th, the wind shifted to the southwest, which was very favorable, for if it kept up for a few days, it would take us to Sao Miguel or Santa Maria.

MOUNTAINOUS SEAS

In order to lighten the airplane, we decided to lift up the anchor, but it would have been better had this not been done, since the seaplane got abeam of the waves and we were in an awkward position.

We had to drop anchor again and be happy with the very small speed. Two sharks passed quite near the seaplane and seemed to invite us down into the depths of the ocean with their triangular fins—but we had promised our loved ones not to be eaten by sharks.

A southwest wind came up strongly, and the sky was gray with the waves springing up like mountains. Our seaplane surmounts them all, then falls down later in the troughs, and the consequent bumps of the seaplane on the sea carry with them an ominous and depressing sound.

On the night of the 24th—the feast of St. John—it rained very heavily. To stick to the rest of the seaplane was difficult. By very enforced maneuvering, we managed to keep the plane facing into the sea and without capsizing.

Every half hour, Gallarza and I were relieved, so that we could each sleep for a time under cover from the rain and sea. The sweeping waves and gigantic drops of water were like a shower and trickling through our clothes to our shoes.

CARRIED SOUTH

I thought when I left Los Alcazares that summer had come and that rough weather was not to be expected, but to all appearances, it was January out there.

Two big fishes pass very near us at dawn, throwing up long mocking jets of water, as if to herald the dawn with news of our predicament. Since the previous evening, the rain had not stopped.

If the night of St. John was bad, the 25th was no more agreeable to us.

Soon after dawn, the horizon began to clear, and the force of the wind, increasing and shifting to northwest, was carrying us south, which didn't make much of a hit with us, as there were no steamship lanes toward the region where we were bound.

The force of the wind made the waves play about the seaplane very dangerously, and during all this day, we could not leave the controls one single moment. That night we had again sent out our S O S without any result.

We drifted aimlessly, molested by the sea and wind.

(Maj. Franco's thrilling narrative will be continued Monday).

Runaway Horse Sends Commuters to Cover

Throngs of commuters hurrying along Canal st. to the North Station at noon today were stampeded when a horse attached to a heavily loaded caravan got loose after the wagon collapsed and started on a rampage down Canal st. in the direction of the North Station.

There was a wild rush for cover as the frightened draft horse clattered along the street. A commuter stopped the animal and turned him over to the driver.

The caravan collapsed from a heavy load of coffee when the wheels locked as the vehicle turned from Canal into Market st.

Car Skids, Man Hurt

KING AND QUEEN MARY WED 36 YEARS TODAY

London, July 6 (AP)—Today King George and Queen Mary received felicitations in the 36th anniversary of their marriage. Tomorrow both will join with Britain's millions in a thanksgiving service for the King's recovery from his recent serious illness.

The King and Queen, in simple morning dress, will go by open carriage tomorrow to Westminster Abbey, where a special thanksgiving service—postponed once before when His Majesty suffered a relapse, has been arranged for the occasion.

Aside from a few reserved seats for they royal family, members of the diplomatic corps, and others, the church will be open to the public. Not more than a few hundred will be able to find admission even then, a fact which has led the King to ask that all worship with him at their own churches.

CHURCH PROCESSION

Entering the abbey at the great west door their majesties will be received by the clergy, headed by the dean of Westminster and the archbishop of Canterbury. The procession will then be formed, passing up the nave to the seat fronting the altar.

The entire ceremony will be comparatively brief.

The choir will sing during the procession, after which the congregation will join in singing the 100th Psalm, followed by the Gloria verse of the National Antnem. Part of the service will be similar to that used on the occasion of the recovery of King George III in 1788. Another part will be like that used in thanksgiving by King Edward VII when he was Prince of Wales.

OFFERTORY FOR HOSPITALS

Prayers will be interspersed among the hymns and anthems, the ceremony concluding with a Te Deum.

An offertory for hospitals will be taken, not only at the Abbey, but at other churches where the service will be held.

King George and Queen Mary were married July 6, 1893, in the Chapel Royal of St. James' Palace. He was then Duke of York, newly attained to the succession through death of his elder brother, the Duke of Clarence. George was only 28 years old at the time.

King Confers High Honors Upon Doctors

Expressing his appreciation of their services, the King invested Sir Humphrey Rolleston with the insignia of Knight of the Grand Cross of the Royal Victorian Order, and Drs. Graham Hodgson and Lionel Whitby with the insignia of commander of the same order.

Cunard Liners to Havana Unopposed

Washington, July 6—Shipping board officials had no hard today that the Cunard Line planned to put the Carmania and Caronia on the run from New York to Havana, Cuba, this summer, but said that the board could take no direct action to meet that situation since it had no passenger ships left.

When the Cunard Line put one steamer on that run last winter, the board switched the President Roosevelt from the United States Lines to meet the competition and announced that it was prepared to put additional ships in that trade if necessary. Since then the board has sold the United States Lines and now has only cargo ships and combined passenger and cargo ships left.

J. P. Fogwell Heads Hyannis Schools

Fall River, July 6—Jerome P. Fogwell of this city has been named superintendent of the Hyannis school system. He succeeds Carlton E. Wheeler.

Fogwell, who has been identified with education work for the past 20 years, is 42, and a native of this city. He had held the principalship of schools for seven years, and a superintendency for 11.

His service as principal at Brewster, Framingham and this city, and was superintendent at Kingston, R. I., Provincetown six years, and Maynard two years.

Quincy Boy Finds Way Home at Last

Tired and hungry, Carroll Kelly, 10 years old, of 32 North st., Quincy Point, returned home after being away from home all night.

Just as the police thought when his absence was reported, the lure of the fireworks attracted him and he wandered so far away from home he didn't know how to get back in the darkness. He slept but does not know where. Home looked pretty good to Carroll this morning and his mother's breakfast table looked better.

New Fire Station Opened in Newton

The new fire station at Washington st. and Centre st., Newton, was "open for business today" when the crew and apparatus of Engine 1 and Ladder 1 moved into the new building.

It was officially inspected by Chief Clarence W. Randlett and Public Buildings Commissioner Cecil C. Chadwick and accepted by them in behalf of the city.

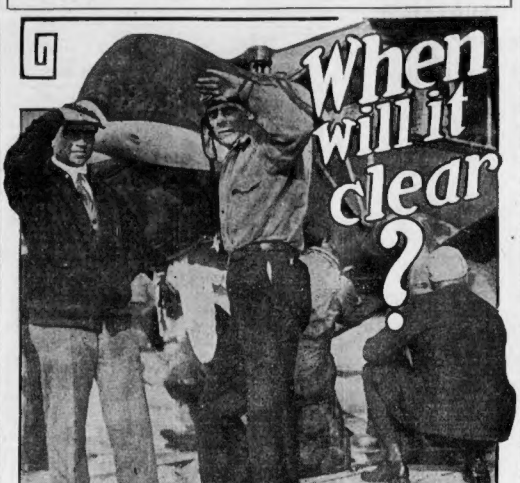
Ready to Blaze Air Trail to Rome



With the powerful motors of the Pathfinder tuned to transatlantic pitch, Roger Q. Williams and Lewis A. Yancey, co-pilots, wait for the seas to smooth the ridged sands of Old Orchard Beach and give them clear running space for their takeoff to Rome. The weather was favorable today, but the rough runway held up the flight.

FEAR MERGER WOULD JUMP LIGHT RATES

Attleboro, July 6 — Municipal ownership of the local electric light and power plant may be the only answer to the impending purchase of the Attleboro Steam & Electric Co. by the New England Power Association, according to Dr. A. F. Gehrung, chairman of the special committee of the Attleboro City Council, appointed to investigate the matter. The special committee is to report to the council next week.

"Much interest has been aroused here," said Councilman Gehrung, "by the news that this local power company, which is owned by a handful of outsiders, has received an offer from the New England Power interests, whereby the stockholders of the local company will receive stock equivalent to more than five times the par value of the stock they now hold."

EXCHANGE OF STOCK

The exchange of stock called for apparently means that the New England Power people would give the stockholders of the Attleboro company stock to the amount of more than $2,500,000 as against the present capital stock of the local company, which amounts to about $450,000 according to the statement of a citizen familiar with the details of the offer.

It is pointed out here that last year the Attleboro company paid a 16 per cent dividend on the par value of its stock. If the new deal is allowed to go through, it is asserted, the company would be required to earn profits which would enable the New England power interests to meet the increased burden of fixed charges placed upon the local company by reason of the enormous price being offered by the New England Power people.

Speaking on this aspect of the matter, Dr. Gehrung said, "We intend to find out just what this will mean to the people of Attleboro. We also intend to look into the matter of the purchase of electricity by the Attleboro company from the Narragansett Electric Co. of Rhode Island.

FEAR INCREASE

In view of the fact that the Narragansett Electric company is owned by the New England Power Association, some of our people fear that with the Attleboro company under the same ownership the price which the Attleboro company pays for its electricity may be increased and the increase passed along to the consumers in Attleboro.

"We have examples of municipal ownership in the neighboring towns of North Attleboro and Mansfield," said Dr. Gehrung, "and I understand there are other municipal plants in the state which are conspicuously successful. Our committee intends to investigate this phase of the matter."

Trust Interest in Papers Scored

Asheville, N. C., July 6—A resolution condemning the purchase of newspapers by interests affiliated or identified with power and news print, or similar industries, was passed unanimously by the Southern Newspaper Association.

Sinclair Rolls Pills on His 53rd Birthday

Washington, July 6 (INS)—Harry Ford Sinclair spent his 53rd birthday anniversary behind bars in the big brick jail at 19th and C sts., Southeast, today.

Sinclair was on the job rolling pills and attending the sick in the district jail infirmary. He has been doing just that for a few months now and will continue until early in November.

His birthday brought about the temporary return of secrecy that guarded the prisoner's early stay at the jail. Supt. Peak was away. Capt. Campbell, in charge, refused to state just how the millionaire was observing his birthday beyond admitting he was working.

Sinclair was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for refusing to testify before the Senate's oil investigating committee and six months for contempt of court in connection with the shadowing of jurors in his trial here.

E. A. O'CONNOR, WAR VET, DIES

News was received in Boston today of the death in Fort Lyons, Col., of Edward A. O'Connor, past commander of the Massachusetts Department of the Disabled Veterans of the World War.

O'Connor's body is being shipped to the home of his parents in Bristol Ferry, R. I., where a full military funeral will be given him. He had been in Colorado for the last two months, after a transfer from the Rutland hospital, where he was a member of the Rutland chapter.

William J. Murphy, national commander of the organization now in Boston on a country-wide tour, learned of the death of O'Connor. The national commander expressed keen regret, and commended the record of O'Connor while State commander.

Sailor With No Tie Barred From Rink

New York, July 6 (INS)—The second alleged barring of a man in Navy uniform within two weeks started a rigid investigation today by Brooklyn Navy Yard officials.

Boatswain's Mate William E. De Wert, of the U. S. S. Dobbin, complained to police he was barred from the Coney Island Skating Rink "because he wore the uniform which everybody cheered so much back in 1917."

Rink officials said they barred De Wert "because he wore no necktie. Navy uniforms don't have neckties. An usher at a local movie palace recently was sent to jail for 90 days for refusing to seat a man in U. S. uniform.

SEEK DATA ON PLUMBING LAW

The first public hearing of the special commission created by the Legislature to study and co-ordinate the plumbing laws of the State will be held at the State House Monday.

Specifically, the commission is desirous of obtaining information on what diseases are spread by poor plumbing; what conflicts are there in the plumbing laws and what changes, if any, should be made.

The commission consists of Patrick W. Donoghue of Boston, master plumber; Andrew McGlynn, executive secretary of the board of registration in plumbing; James H. Souter of Andover, journeyman plumber; Charles W. Hull of Boston, architect; Gerald J. Callahan, assistant attorney-general; Health Commissioner George H. Bigelow.

$175,000,000 to End N.Y. Death Crossings

New York, July 6 (INS)—The last chapter in a controversy that has lasted 40 years between the city and the New York Central railroad was written when Mayor Walker signed a contract with the railroad for the $175,000,000 West Side improvement. It calls for elimination of all grade crossings on Manhattan, removal of the tracks from 11th ave., that have caused many deaths, and beautification of Riverside Park. The railroad will pay $110,000,000, the city $50,000,000 and the State $15,000,000 of the cost.

Lifesaving Taught Boys at L Street

Under the direction of Superintendent George D. Cuddihy, life saving classes for boys have been started at the L st. bathhouse with Benjamin J. Donahue, chief lifeguard, as instructor.

Every youngster received instructions which, with swimming lessons, will be given daily during the summer season. Boys are taught the prone or Schaeffer method and the Sylvester method of resuscitation; the firemen's grip for carrying a drowning person from the water; the way to break a front strangle hold, and the back strangle hold; the "tired swimmer's carry," and other methods of handling themselves in the water.

Swimming lessons are also part of the daily program. At times there have been as many as 1500 or 2000 boys in daily attendance, and there was not one who was not able to swim at the end of the year.

100-MILE GALE SWEEPS OVER EUROPE

London, July 6 (AP)—Central Europe dug itself out today from debris of a series of storms which swept down from Southeastern Germany, killing 23 persons and injuring hundreds in Czechoslovakia, Austria, Jugoslavia, Germany and Switzerland.

The storms, which at times reached hurricane intensity and exceeded 100 miles an hour velocity, did widespread damage, destroying growing crops in some districts, tearing down telegraph and telephone wires and interrupting railroad traffic.

100-MILE GALE.

The disturbances began in Germany as hail storms, tore down through Bohemia and Moravia, and, swinging westward, turned into Austria. Here the storms divided, one section sweeping south through Jugoslavia and another continuing westward into Switzerland.

The wind reached a velocity of 100 miles an hour in Austria, interrupting shipping in the lakes and in the Danube, and maintained an average of 75 miles an hour. It was particularly violent near Nuremberg, Germany, where one peasant was killed, thousands of windows were smashed by hail, and many homes were partially destroyed.

HUNDREDS INJURED.

Ten persons were killed at Zenica, Jugoslavia, when the river Rosna, whipped by the tornado, flooded a cottage in which a number of peasants had sought shelter. Seven persons were killed in Bohemia and Moravia and 10 more in Austria.

Hundreds were injured along the path of the storm by falling walls, uprooted trees and flying debris. There were the usual number of freaks. In one village, Hrasin, Moravia, the wind wrecked the cemetery and exposed coffins in the ground. At Pardubice, Bohemia, a passenger alighting from a train was blown under the wheel of a coach and was killed when the train started.

SEEK TO AVERT WORLD WAR ON OIL

New York, July 6 (AP)—The New York Times says a committee of American oil executives will go to Europe to confer with European leaders in the industry in an effort to adjust world oil problems, which are assuming such serious proportions as to threaten open conflict.

Revision of export prices, the elimination of friction between American and foreign oil interests and world-wide curtailment of production are subjects that will figure prominently in the discussions.

One member of the committee, R. C. Holmes, president of the Texas Corporation, already is on his way to Europe. Two others, James A. Moffett, vice-president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and George P. Whaley, president of the Vacuum Oil Company, will sail Sunday night on the Aquitania. They will be joined in Europe by other American oil officials.

Primarily, the purpose of the trip is to study the question of gasoline export prices and try to reconcile differences that have developed over this question between certain American oil producers and certain European oil interests, chiefly the Royal Dutch Shell group. At the same time, it is understood, the American committee will take up with the leading European oil producers the problem of over-production throughout the world, which is closely related to the export price question.

Faces Arraignment for Injuring Cops

An aftermath of a collision of the Newton and Arlington patrol wagon and a truck, in which five persons were injured, will take place in the Newton District Court next Monday, when John R. Killam of Lincoln st., Brookline, will be arraigned on a charge of driving so that the lives and safety of the public might be endangered.

Three policemen, a prisoner and Killam were injured in the crash.

ENGAGEMENT OFF, GIRL MUST RETURN RING

Old English law was quoted today in Salem Superior Court by Judge Hammond in ruling that an engagement ring is the property of the donor after the engaged couple have agreed to break their engagement.

Henry Molliver, Chelsea druggist, won his suit to force Miss Mildred Rosenthal of Lynn to return the $500 diamond engagement ring he had given her. She had countered that the ring was really the property of her mother, who she said had loaned it to Molliver with the understanding he was to pay for it on part payments.

The judge ruled that when a gift is made in anticipation of marriage and where the disagreement is mutual, the gift must revert to the donor.

Bricklayer Gives a Regal Banquet

Lianes, Spain, July 6 (AP)—Friends of a bricklayer have had a right royal time with banquet and drinks galore, all paid for with gold. The police thought the bricklayer must be a robber, but it turned out that in tearing down a house he had found an old box containing 60,000 gold pesetas about 200 years old. The value in American money was $8400.

No Alimony if Wife Prefers Bridge to Home, Husband

Chicago, July 6 (INS)—Wives who neglect home and children for bridge games may expect no consideration from Judge William N. Gemmill.

James Breen, defendant in a divorce suit, declared his wife, Marie, played bridge until the wee morning hours several nights a week and left him to get his own meals and care for their two youngsters. And, worse, sometimes foisted on him the children of her partners as well.

"There will be no temporary alimony," quoted the court. "I will not consider alimony under such circumstances."

Brave Police Force Arrests Own Wife

Fairhaven, N. J., July 6 (AP)—Joseph Herden, police force of this village, is a brave man. He arrested his own wife on complaint of Miss Pearl Mack, who averred Mrs. Herden was creating a disturbance at her residence in upbraiding her for acquaintance with the police force. A justice of the peace freed the wife after exacting a promise that more subtle methods be used.

150 Get Wet Feet

Tulare, Cal., July 6 (INS)—One hundred fifty persons were plunged into three feet of water when a light bridge over the Kawah river at a resort near here collapsed. None was injured.

SETTLEMENT OF SHOE STRIKE IS NEAR

Haverhill, July 6—Prospects appeared bright for early settlement of the strike that has been on for the past four weeks with 30 firms and 3000 employes involved, over the demands of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union for a five-day week and restoration of 1927 wages, the latter involving an increase of 10 per cent over present wages.

The Joint District Council, which has been handling the strike situation, held an extended meeting today as a result of a proposition submitted at the joint conference with the General Executive Board of the union last Wednesday for a five-year agreement and present wages.

The Joint-District Council promised a reply today and terms upon which a new agreement would be made were adopted and forwarded to the General Executive Board, which is holding its semi-annual meeting in Boston.

It was confidently expected that the General Executive Board will again visit this city and bring the Joint-District Council and the Shoe Manufacturers Association together with indications that new committees will be named by both organizations to work out an agreement.

Members of the Joint-District Council admitted that the union was ready to resume negotiations and would consent to the appointment of new conferees.

INQUIRY INTO DORCHESTER FIRE OPENS

An inquest into the cause of the fire on the night of July 4 at 49-51 Fowler st., Dorchester, started today at the State House by Fire Inspector Thomas A. Thompson, was postponed until next Wednesday, following the interviewing of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Caplan, owners of the house, and one occupant, Nathan Zukerman.

Inspector Thompson declared that the blaze was on the third floor where an apartment of three rooms is unoccupied. When the firemen arrived, Thompson continued, all the doors and windows were secured and nobody was at home.

"We found evidence of six separate and distinct fires and preparations made for four more," the inspector said. "The fires were burning inside the plaster and there were newspaper trailers on the floor. The damage was about $300."

Thompson said the Caplans claimed to have left the house at 8:30 a. m. for Nantasket, returning at about 8:30 p. m., had something to eat and left for Franklin Field, where they remained until 11 o'clock. They arrived home, they said, Thompson declared, to find that there had been a fire.

It is understood that a number of witnesses will be called on Wednesday.

B. U. PUBLICITY HEAD MARRIES

Evelyn Louise Ormsby, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stepney Ormsby, was married to Irwin Clive Cowper, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Cowper of Brookline, at the home of the bride's parents, 8 Parkline, Jamaica Plain. The bridegroom is director of the Boston University News Bureau.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. P. Reiver and the preliminary service was read by Prof. Joseph Haskell of Boston University.

Miss Elizabeth Templeton of Newport, Vt., was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Caroline P. Cowper, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Alice Waring of Malden; Miss Helen Colpitts of Allston, and Miss Margaret Forrest of Jamaica Plain.

E. Prescott Koch of Brookline was best man, and the ushers were Paul Bryant of Manchester and J. Frederick Onthank of Newton.

Miss Ormsby is a graduate of the Girls' Latin school and the Katherine Gibbs secretarial school, and is a former student at Boston University's college of liberal arts. She is a member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority.

Cowper is a graduate of Brookline high school and Boston University's college of liberal arts. He is a member of Kappa Phi Alpha fraternity.

30 LAWYERS IN NEW YORK RING

New York, July 6 (INS)—The bankruptcy ring, about which so much has been hinted and so little actually is known, was composed of 30 lawyers, it was learned today.

Their identities and methods of operation have been uncovered by the investigation made by Col. William J. Donovan, former assistant attorney-general, who was retained by the Bronx and Manhattan Bar Association to "clean house" among local attorneys.

More than 500 witnesses were questioned during Donovan's investigation and some of the results were made public today by George A. Liesure, his assistant, who said: "They had a monopoly on bankruptcy cases. If anyone took a case to another lawyer he found himself opposed in various ways and trouble always developed."

One of the thirty, according to Liesure, is to appear before Federal Judge Thomas D. Thatcher on Tuesday to be asked to explain several of his actions.

Dracut Couple Are 50 Years Married

Dracut, July 6—Mr. and Mrs. Rockwood D. Coburn of New Boston Village observed their golden wedding anniversary yesterday. A formal celebration of the event took place on the holiday. They were married in Lowell, but have spent most of their lives in Dracut, where they are active members of the Dracut grange.

Oxford Gives Germans Rhodes Honor Again

Oxford, England, July 6 (AP)—German students have been restored to the list of those eligible for the famed scholarships of Oxford University.

The restoration is not on the basis that existed before the war, but for two scholarships annually, tenable each for two years permitting four German scholars at Oxford constantly.

Announcement of the action was made by Stanley Baldwin, former premier, at a dinner at New Rhodes house, honoring the 25th anniversary of the founding of the scholarships. He said it had been decided upon by the trustees, subject to approval by university authorities.

The Prince of Wales was present and in his toast to the Rhodes scholars said: "I am delighted to hear the trustees are going to renew German scholarships.

"We welcome the Germans back most heartily. There will be found on the rolls of honor of the university names of the German Rhodes scholars who fell in the war, which shows that this foundation is not based on any narrow racial feeling and that its ideals are those which all may follow, forgetful of past enmities."

It was pointed out that of 87 German Rhodes scholars ten were killed in the war, one being the son of Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg.

Francesca Braggiotti Becomes Bride in Hub Today

Famous Society Dancer Weds John Davis Lodge in Church of the Advent Before Distinguished Group

AT HIGH NOON TODAY IN THE CHURCH OF THE ADVENT, the picturesque Francesca Braggiotti forsook her nationally heralded terpsichorean fame and exchanged vows with John Davis Lodge. And the socially invested attended to see given into the safe-keeping of the grandson of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, the most glorified society girl of the day. Superlatives are oft times unpalatable but just this once I ask indulgence that I might do justice to the beauty and talent, charm and personality of the Francesca who, as the church chimes sounded their sweet accompaniment, joined the happy group of brides. For, indeed, the Brookline daughter has not only made social history in Hub circles but in every other important smart set of the country's embiasoned register trail.

A MORE exquisite bride society never has been than the Francesca who in ivory satin and Valencia and Brussels lace kneeled at the altar to say her "I will." A six-yard satin train edged in Valencia followed the gorgeous white figure into the church. The bridal laces were both used by her grandmothers.

Of Brussels lace was the huge berths of the gown, while the veil was of Mantilla knotted to the head with real orange blossoms. White orchids and lily-of-the-valley in a sheaf did Miss Braggiotti carry. She wore no ornament of any kind, save the real orange blossoms which tucked the lace sleeves around the elbows.

Miss Gloria was in yellow chiffon and dotted net with large yellow horsehair hat, a striking blue for contrast in the ribbon which hung from the summery chapeau to drape softly the maid-of-honor ensemble.

The train bearers were in blue chiffon and the flower girl in pink. Sheafs of flowers of many hues attached to the pews with white ribbons lined the aisle.

CHEERFULLY colored were the gowns of many of the guests. Virginia Rice in flowered chiffon, Mrs. Harold Coolidge in similar prevailing mode, Mrs. Jordan L. Mott, 3d, in striking burnt yellow and black, June Sears in green and yellow print, Lillian Duncan in a white and greyish-black organdie creation, Mrs. A. Lynde Cochrane in green-ish yellow print ensemble, Olga Monk in brown, Mrs. George Cabot Lodge, the groom's mother, in beige lace, were but few of the attractive guests.

THEN, too, there were the Russel Codmans, the Julian Codmans, the Agassiz family and the Adamowskis, the Coolidges, and both Curtis matrons—Mrs. Francis Curtis and Mrs. Allen Curtis—Mrs. Guild and her sisters, Mrs. Lavell, the Converse couple and the Cabots.

The Endicott Dexters and the William Dexters were guests, as were the Beverly Cove Sears, Rosamond Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Pierce and family, Mrs. Arthur Perrin, Mr. and Mrs. Morton Prince, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Prince, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul and daughter, the G. P. Gardners, Mr. and Mrs. Greenough, Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge Greene, Judge and Mrs. Robert Grant, Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Parkman Haven, Mrs. Henry Spooner, the H. H. Thorndikes, the Oliver Wolcotts, C. H. Whitneys and Geoffrey Whitneys, the Lester Lelands, Mrs. William Ingraham, the Ernest Iselin family, Herbert Leeds, Mrs. E. G. Lowery, the Ronald T. Lymans and Miss Charlotte Lyman, Mrs. Herbert Otis and her daughter, Mrs. Oveson and her daughter, Margaret, Clipston Sturgis, Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft Davis, the Elisha Flaggs.

WHEN the inimitable Francesca slowly treaded the carpeted aisle of the Brimmer st. edifice of matrimony, many were the friends to move in spirit with her. From sunny California Mr. Braggiotti especially came in the past few days to bestow parental blessing and fatherly invocation of happiness on the daughter who has brought so much joy to his heart and renown to his household. The honor of delivering Francesca to young Lodge was his, and Mr. Braggiotti made the most of the civility. Gloria was her sister's maid of honor.

A WORLD TOUR DID HENRY CABOT LODGE, JR., bring to an end that he might be in time to attend his brother's bachelor dinner and to serve as his best man today. Not alone was he in the abrupt ending of this and that, for those who are to be in the city for the nuptials have come from every corner of the globe. Sebatiano Herbert Braggiotti halted his theatrical pursuits in New York to attend and from over the pond and Paris sailed Isidore Mario Braggiotti, both brothers anxious about their assigned task of assisting in the seating of guests. Only one of Boston's contingent was deputized with duty and he was John Davis, who also helped to seat the attendants. Completing the usher squad were Charles Van Brunt Cushman of Pomfret, Ct.; William White Ingraham of Woonsocket, R. I.; Matthias Plum, Jr., of Rumson, N. J., Jordan Lawrence Mott, 3d, and Ivs Sergei Voldato-Patcevitch of New York and Thomas Gordon Wheelock of Chicago, and John Walter Wood of New York, who directed the ushering.

WITH PRIDE THE TRAIN bearers, Rosamond Higgins and Dorothy Chase, walked in the processional. Dainty Cynthia Sortwell was flower girl. Directly after the ceremony, the bride and bridegroom received in the rooms of the church building. Later an informal wedding breakfast at the Braggiotti Brookline residence in Upland rd. was served for the members of the bridal party and the immediate relatives and intimate friends, further felicitations and congratulatory messages were expressed. For three months are the bridal couple to enjoy their honeymoon, with European travel and continental excursioning to foreign show places. After the first of October Mr. Lodge will house his bride in New York, there to remain indefinitely.

EQUAL IN PRETENTIOUS pageantry were the guests who flock to the society temple for a vision of the traditionally-white-garbed bride. Into the book of books have their names been written and their august presence add another feature to a heading social performance. The artistry of Miss Braggiotti has brought her friends time after time to her dance performances, for always was there something new about her skillful application of the principles of beauty. She was ever a valued asset to the Vincent Club. In addition to those already mentioned she has a sister, Miss Maria Braggiotti, and two brothers, Rama and Dorillo Braggiotti.

HOUSED IN THE RAMBLING cottage close to the sea at Nahant, Mrs. Curtis Guild and her house-guest, Miss Alice Edgar, have returned from a delightful week spent in Old Orchard, Me. Before their journey over the road back to the North Shore, Mrs. Guild and Miss Edgar were dinner guests of Capt. and Mrs. Yancey at the Maine resort, and before that they were graciously entertained by Capt. Rogers Williams. Mrs. Guild and her sister, Mrs. John Lavell, were two I saw at the Wolcott-Collins nuptials a week ago and I daresay the wife of the former late governor of Massachusetts will be among those present at today's ceremony.

A SURPRISING announcement emanated from Brookfield, the Hamilton estate of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Moulton of Beacon st., with word that Betty is to be married on September 7 to Richard Hubbard, son of Dr. and Mrs. Joshua C. Hubbard of Reeve's Tavern, Wayland. It wasn't so long ago that Betty and her parents were in London and it was only six days ago that they established themselves at Brookfield. However, the betrothal of these two is announced and now the girls who did the honors in '28 and '27 with dark-haired Betty will spend the next two months in eagerness for the approaching nuptials which are to take place in Christ Church, Hamilton. A reception at Brookfield will follow. I wonder if the espousals will interfere with Miss Moulton's Junior League duty to which she was elected this spring. The handling of the League's funds have been entrusted to her for the following year, but maybe Betty will combine the two jobs ably.

LEGISLATOR TO WED VETERAN

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Martha Nutting Brooks of Gloucester, representative from the 16th Essex district, one of the outstanding women in the active political life of the state, today caused quite a surprise in legislative and political circles.

Formal announcement of the engagement of Miss Brooks to Maj. Walter DuBois Brookings of Alexandria, Va., is to be made today by Mr. and Mrs. Addison Gott Brooks, whose sister she is. The wedding is to take place late in the summer.

Miss Brooks is a graduate of Wellesley, class of 1904, and has long been an active worker in the religious and political organizations of the state. In 1923 she was the first woman to become an alderman in any Massachusetts city, and she is now serving her second term as a member of the legislature.

During her service she has commanded the respect and regard of her legislative associates, and has made a host of friends. At the session this year she was honored by being assigned as the first woman ever to serve on the committee on legal affairs.

Maj. Brookings is the son of Mrs. Emma (DuBois) and the late John Emory Brookings of Hollywood, Cal. He was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1895, and from the Harvard law school in 1898, later becoming a partner in his father's lumber business.

Hoover Will Review Rainbow Division

Washington, July 6 — President Hoover will review the parade of the Rainbow Division at Baltimore on Monday, July 15.

The President will motor to Baltimore and be guest of honor at a luncheon given by officers of the division which will be holding its annual convention in that city at that time.

After the luncheon, the chief executive will review the parade of the veterans and then will motor back to Washington.

Bank Clerk Locks Burglar Outside

Hamilton, Ont., July 6—James Hobbs, teller of a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, spoiled a robbery attempt at the bank. When ordered to the vault at the point of a gun, Hobbs slammed the door shut as he left the teller's cage.

Clubs to Press War on Billboards

A MORE vigorous campaign designed against the desecration of American landscapes by billboards is now being waged by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in an effort to arouse the people to save the outdoor beauty of the country.

Chairman of this movement is Mrs. W. L. Lawton who heads the department of rural and highway advertising for the Federation.

For five years has this organized body fought the battle and at the Biennial Council recently an even more intensive program than pursued in the past was sanctioned for the future. The Federation policy is the restriction of all outdoor advertising to commercial districts.

"We seek to save not only the scenic spots but also the beauty of the every-day, quietly lovely country," Mrs. Lawton said. "Our principle is—The landscape is no place for advertising.

"We are working not merely to secure immediate results in the shape of a few billboards taken down here and there. We are working for permanent basic results, to establish our principle in legislation. We hope, possibly in 10 years' time, to secure legislation in every state which will protect our highways, not alone from billboards but also from hot-dog stands and other uglifications.

"Our work is constructive. When the billboard men say our policy is destructive, they may as well say that weeding the garden is destructive. Our work is conservation of one of the nation's greatest assets, its natural beauty. Nothing is more constructive than conservation. This is no longer a woman's movement. Groups of business men are lining up with us.

"The American spirit will not much longer tolerate the grave injustice of sacrificing an asset of the entire people for the profit of one comparatively small group, the billboard industry."

MASSACHUSETTS

Did you know, clubwomen, that Massachusetts has no choice as to what bird is the official warbler of our State?

It recorded itself so in a recent survey made by Mrs. Katherine B. Tlopela, former chairman of wild life, and present chairman of conservation for the General Federation.

Among those states which made a selection are the following: Alabama, flicker; California, condor; Arkansas, mocking bird; Colorado, red-shafted flicker and water ouzel; Florida, mocking bird; Georgia, brown thrasher; Idaho, eagle; Illinois, song sparrow; Iowa, rose-breasted grosbeak; Kansas, meadow-lark; Kentucky, cardinal; Louisiana, pelican; Maine, chickadee; Maryland, Baltimore oriole; Minnesota, goldfinch; Missouri, blue bird; Montana, mountain blue bird; Nebraska, western meadow lark; New Hampshire, purple finch; New York, blue bird; North Dakota, meadow lark; Ohio, house wren; Oklahoma and Oregon, meadow lark; Texas, mocking bird; Vermont, hermit thrush; Virginia, robin; Washington, woodpecker; West Virginia, cardinal; Wisconsin, robin; Wyoming, meadow lark.

CHURCH COURT FREES MAN IT HAD JAILED

Cambridge, Eng., July 6 (AP)—John Stevens, wealthy Cambridge landowner, imprisoned in Bedford jail by the Ecclesiastical Court at Ely for refusing to repair the Church of St. Edmund on his property, was ordered released by the Church Court today.

Sitting at Ely, the court heard Stevens' application to clear himself. He had made affidavit admitting he was legally liable for repairs to the church and regretting he had resisted proceedings against him. He signed an unqualified undertaking to carry out the repairs and to pay the cost of the court proceedings.

The case had stirred unusual interest because few people knew the Church of England had power to send people to prison.

Under the old deed of Stevens' property he was bound to repair the church, but he maintained this clause had lapsed through disuse. The ecclesiastical court thereupon imprisoned him under a law passed in the reign of William IV giving the church such power in civil cases relating to church property.

MAN, 27, NEAR DEATH BY GAS

Joseph J. Corey, 27, of 126 Greaton rd., Roslindale, is on the danger list at the Boston City Hospital as the result of gas poisoning. His mother, Mrs. Mary A. Corey, returned home and found all the doors and windows locked. She called a neighbor, James Martin of 125 Greaton rd., who assisted her to get into the house. There they found Corey prostrate. A gas jet was open.

Corey was removed to the City Hospital in the police ambulance. He has been ill, and despondent, his mother says.

Angry With Bishop, Premier Snubs Him

Pretoria, South Africa, July 6 (AP)—Premier J. B. Hertzog of South Africa will not attend the thanksgiving service for the King's return to the throne on Sunday at St. Alban's Cathedral, as had been expected, but will attend the services in the Reformed Church instead.

Gen. Hertzog made the change because he is angry with the bishop of Pretoria, the Rt. Rev. Neville Talbot, for writing an article in the Anglo-Catholic publication in which the bishop protests against "the wicked political playing upon racial feeling" in South Africa "on general elections campaign."

Veterans's Chief Is Feted in Worcester

Worcester, July 6—William J. Murphy of California, the newly elected commander of the Disabled Veterans of the World War, made an official visit to this city and received a key to the city from Mayor O'Hara. He was greeted at the Hotel Bancroft by a reception committee, and later went to Rutland, where he inspected the Hubert F. Watson chapter at the United States Veterans' Hospital. The visit here was the first in a series that will include the whole country. National Commander Murphy is a native of South Boston.

PLANE CODE WILL INSURE MORE SAFETY

Washington, July 6 (AP)—A comprehensive governmental move to insure more airworthy planes has been taken in new department of commerce "airworthiness requirements," which set up rigorous standards for the safety of vital parts.

An analysis made by the aeronautical Chamber of Commerce shows specific changes in the "airworthiness requirements," the aircraft engineering code followed by American manufacturers to obtain approved type certificate for their planes before they are sold to the public.

Advance copies of the code have been prepared by the Chamber and sent to its members, who include approximately 85 percent of the airplane manufacturers in the country.

LOADING TESTS REQUIRED

To bring about further strengthening of airplane structures, the Department of Commerce will require manufacturers to demonstrate by loading tests the strength of all control surfaces and control systems, and the shock absorbing qualities of landing gears on their planes. Such tests were not required previously.

Specimens of all wood members used in airplane construction must now be loaded to destruction and samp of the parts that fail must be analyzed to determine their physical properties.

Cabin planes must have one exit for each six persons carried instead of just two exits as previously required. Detailed specifications for all openings and exits are given.

The former sketchy requirements for engine installation have been expanded to include detailed instructions to insure the highest type of construction.

PROPELLER CHANGES

Propeller clearance above the ground has been changed from a minimum of six inches to nine inches for land planes and 18 inches for seaplanes. The propellers must be so designed and adjusted that they will limit the engine speed to 105 per cent of the official rated speed at full throttle in level flight.

Performance and flight test specifications have been simplified to describe the procedure followed by department inspectors. The relative efficiency of various wings must be determined from rational formulae instead of from the inadequate curves formerly specified. Methods of calculating air loads and shear weight for wings which are tapered in thickness have been changed to comply with the latest facts known to aeronautical engineers.

The introduction of glider building in the United States has prompted the addition of a new paragraph devoted to this type of construction.

Wages Not an Issue in Big Strike Threat

Chicago, July 6 (AP)—A strike vote being taken among the locomotive engineers and firemen on railway systems involves questions of representation and mileage for extra engineers, and a wage increase is not at issue, said R. E. Edrington, assistant grand chief engineer of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, in a statement today.

KLAN RETURNS TO ATLANTA

Washington, July 6 (AP)—The Washington Post today says "the Ku Klux Klan has abandoned Washington as a national headquarters, but is now back in Atlanta, Ga., the place of its birth."

Two reasons are given for the transfer. One official is quoted as explaining that the national headquarters was moved to Washington because this was believed to be the best place to direct its campaign against Alfred E. Smith.

"Well, the campaign is over now," he is quoted as saying. "Will we move back again? That may depend on who the candidates are."

The other reason ascribed is that "the Klan has just erected two new buildings in Atlanta, one a factory where the regalia is turned out, the other an administrative building for the officials and clerks of the organization."

Rum Maker Laments Seizure of His Still

Haverhill, July 6—"What's a guy to do when the coppers toss him into the jug for making nice, exhilarating molasses rum and then won't give him back his still when he gets out?"

Such was the tearful, albeit somewhat unusual, complaint addressed by Daniel Kenny, Haverhill rum-o-molasses man, to the mayor and city council.

When Kenny airily stepped forth from the Lawrence jail, whither his laboratory work had stowed him for a short period, his first thought was for his trusty still. Seized by unfeeling raiders some time ago, the Kenny still had been carried to the police station. "And sure-ly," thought Kenny, as he made his way home, "they can't mean to keep it. How on earth can a man make rum without a still?"

At this point there flashed through the Kenny consciousness the possibility that the law really intended to curtail the trickling output of his still.

"But then," pondered Mr. Kenny —and not without logic—"there's a lot of good copper in that still. I'll junk it."

So the Haverhill City Council, however, failed to get what Kenny meant. Perhaps the marshal, watchdog of the still while the Kenny debt to society was being liquidated, would be willing to give it up. Marshal Charles B. Jones, duly braced by the steadfast Kenny, proved just as obstinate as the council.

Town Prosecutor's Home Is Bombed

Manchester, Ct., July 6—Police investigated, but without result, the explosion of a home-made bomb flung at the door of the home of Town Court Prosecutor Charles R. Hathaway. The bmb shattered the door and frightened the family.

Hathaway said he believed an attempt on his life was made. He has been prosecuting attorney for 28 years.

Boy Falls 35 Feet

CHARGED WITH THREATENING PRESIDENT

Seattle, Wash., July 6 (AP)—Charged with felony in "making threats against the President," M. Uchimiyama, 70-year-old Japanese chemist, was held over for federal action by Commissioner A. C. Bowman.

Uchimiyama is alleged to have written threatening letters to the last three Presidents and to the Emperor of Japan, in addition to other prominent persons. He has been sought for seven years by the American and Japanese Governments.

The only letter mentioned in the complaint sworn to before the commissioner was the following:

"Mr. Hoover, the President of the United States, Mr. President:

"We will send you a short writing again. We wish you to come to the Pacific coast in this summer and at that time we will take your life with shot, because for the sake of world peace to kill reason. Not show this note, you guess, please.

"We have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant, membership M. Orient Club."

U. S. Dist. Atty. Paul D. Coles said Uchimiyama might be deported after being brought to trial. In Japan, if convicted, he would be executed, as death is the only penalty for threats against the Emperor. He denied writing any threatening letter.

100 BILLION DOLLAR BANK SEEN BY KING

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, July 6—A hundred-billion-dollar world bank, looming as a financial Rock of Gibraltar against all existing financial institutions, may grow out of the treasury set up by the Allied Reparations Commission for exchanging German reparations payments, it was intimated here today.

Already hinted at by Thomas P. Lamont, international financier and reparations expert, Senator William H. King (D.) of Utah today recommended the project as certain to promote world trade and international peace. He said the benefits of such a gigantic world financial institution would be fabulous and that the United States would reap the greatest rewards, because of her tremendous international commerce.

HINT FROM LAMONT

The International Bank, established by the reparations commission, will receive payments from Germany in foreign exchange and in currency and make distributions to the creditor allied nations. Lamont already has hinted this institution can develop into a real world bank.

King endorsed the world bank idea as certain to promote trade expansion throughout the world and thereby to promote peaceful relations between nations, declaring where people and two nations have peaceful business relations, war seldom ensues.

WORLD CLEARING HOUSE.

Possibilities of such a world bank almost stagger the imagination. For one thing, such an institution would act as a clearing house for all the world's commerce. In 1928 world trade probably reached the stupendous total of $67,000,000,000. In 10 years, if the current annual growth of 8 per cent is continued, the total trade will reach $100,000,000,000.

"I believe an international bank would be a sound financial and economic institution," King declared. "It would handle the settlement of accounts between nations, aid in the buying and selling of commodities between peoples and make for better relations internationally, both economically and politically. It would also facilitate the world's trade and promote world peace."

Disbar Lawyer Who Acted for Dempsey

Milwaukee, Wis., July 6 (INS)—Raymond J. Cannon, prominent lawyer who represented Jack Dempsey when he was heavyweight champion, today was under a two-year disbarment from practice in Wisconsin as a consequence of an inquiry into ambulance chasing in this city.

The decision was voted by the State Supreme Court on recommendation of E. C. Fiedler of Beloit, who described Cannon of unethical practises.

Grease Fire Causes Scare at Touraine

A grease fire in the kitchen of the Hotel Touraine caused a scare today when heavy smoke poured from the kitchen and brought fire apparatus to the scene.

Guests were quickly assured that there was no danger and the blaze was extinguished with no damage.

Violinist Denies "Riff With Wife

DAUGHTERS OFF TO CONVENTION

Nearly 100 "Daughters" representing the New England states, entrained at the South Station today as delegates to the ninth annual convention of the National Circle of Daughters of Isabella in Denver.

A special B. & A. train of seven coaches was used for the trip.

The Boston party will pick up 40 more at Worcester and Springfield. Their sessions will start July 10 for four days, after which many will take side trips to see the scenic wonders of Colorado. The special train is due back in Boston, July 17.

The local group of Catholic women was in charge of Miss Catherine Burns, State regent for Massachusetts. In charge of the entire New England delegation was Miss Carolyn Manning of New Bedford, national director.

Mrs. Mary E. Booth of New Haven, Ct., the national regent, went on ahead to the convention headquarters.

BIG PROFITS IN BEET SUGAR

Washington, July 6—Although the Senate finance committee has concluded hearings on the sugar schedule, the battle lines are still forming for the crucial fight over the sugar rates when the tariff bill reaches the Senate floor.

For sheer bitterness it threatens to outrival the famous scrap over the wool rate in the Payne-Aldrich tariff of 1909.

Scarcely a day has passed since congressional hearings on the present bill began that proponents, either of a lower or higher sugar duty, have not bombarded the capital with statements and charges. The latest statements came from E. A. Hurguess of New Orleans, president of the Domestic Sugar Producers Association, and from the permanent committee on U. S. relations of the American Chamber of Commerce of Cuba.

PRODUCERS SUSSPICIOUS.

Burguires declared the domestic producers view with "suspicion and uneasiness" the proposals for a sliding scale sugar tariff as a trick to aid Cuban interests. Chairman Smoot of the finance committee is credited with starting the sliding scale agitation and has arranged a tentative plan.

"Our preference is for a fixed tariff that cannot be manipulated by foreigners and by competition to the injury of American producers and consumers," said Burguieres.

"Pleas of domestic sugar companies for tariff relief come with poor grace," said the statement of the American Chamber, as "four out of five of the largest beet sugar companies, representing 82 per cent of beet sugar production, showed excellent profits for 1928-1929."

CITE BIG PROFITS

The company, said the statement, had total earnings of $8,530,230, or an average profit of .492 cents a pound. One concern, the Great Western Sugar Company, it was declared, earned .772 cents a pound.

Several witnesses testified before the committee that the House increase on raw sugar to $2.40 per 100 pounds would cost the American consumer between $210,000,000 and $265,000,000 annually.

On Monday the finance sub-committee of the metals schedule will resume hearings and the rayon schedule will be started by another committee. With these schedules completed, the entire committee will consider the free list and administrative features of the bill.

ANN'S 'BROKEN HEART' TO BE VALUED TODAY

Chicago, July 6 (INS)—Atty. Ehrlich today was to complete his final plea to the jury that they value Ann Livingston's "broken heart" at $250,000. He was to be followed by Atty. Bussian, counsel for Franklin Hardinge, 62, millionaire defendant.

Describing Ann Livingston as a "friendless, forsaken girl" and crying "Perjury!" at the testimony of Mrs. Bessie Heath, Ehrlich began his plea.

In rebuttal testimony Atty. Bussian lashed viciously at Miss Livingston's case with more "surprise witnesses" to blast her character and prove her an "unscrupulous gold-digger."

Mrs. James Beyer, formerly Ann's landlady in Tulsa, testified Ann confided her intentions of marrying Hardinge, divorcing him and getting his money.

NOTED TEACHER IS DEAD AT 74

Ashburnham, July 6 (AP)—Dr. Hervey S. Cowell, 74, principal emeritus of Cushing academy, died today at his home here. For 42 years, until his retirement in 1926, Dr. Cowell has been head of Cushing and during that time had taken an important part in educational and religious activities of New England.

Dr. Cowell had been a proponent for prohibition for many years and at one time was the candidate of that party for governor of Massachusetts.

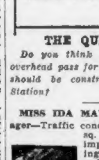
The Curious Quizzer

South Station Business Folk Answer Question and Pose for Picture

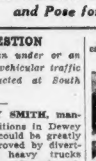
THE QUESTION

Do you think an under or an overhead pass for vehicular traffic should be constructed at South Station?

MISS IDA MAY SMITH, manager—Traffic conditions in Dewey Square would be greatly improved by diverting heavy trucks and passenger vehicles from the street in front of the South Station. If it were possible to construct an overpass I would think it would relieve much of the congestion caused by the motor cars constantly passing this busy section.



HORACE D. WILLIS, store manager—Either an overhead pass or a subway for vehicular traffic would cause depression in business around the South Station. The business men around here would soon realize the damage to their business. I believe there are few who desire to take the traffic from the street surface.



MISS ISOBEL MacDONALD, cashier—I am not in favor of a change in the present traffic system in this locality. If automobiles were sent over or under the street at South Station the business men here about would be losers. I believe we would lose a great deal of trade if people who ride in automobiles along here had to travel over or beneath the street.

ARTHUR E. OGDEN, store proprietor—Keep traffic on the street near the South Station and it will suit me and most of the other business people around here. If an overhead pass is constructed for automobiles it would have to be sky-high. If a subway were constructed it would have to be built hungry or feet below it, or it would interfere with the Boston Elevated subway. The Elevated structure should never have been built, and if it is ever taken down I think the people of Boston should not be made to pay for its removal. Business in Dewey sq. is better off with the present system of handling traffic than it would be by some new arrangement.

Inventor Claims He Has Perfected Television

Berlin, July 6 (AP)—Denes von Mihaly, Hungarian inventor, now living in Berlin, claims to have solved the problem of a movable television apparatus which can be taken into the daylight and can make scenes immediately visible to millions.

In connection with his transmitting apparatus, Von Mihaly uses a lens functioning much like that of the photographic camera. According to the inventor, it is no longer necessary to use a dark chamber.

LAW COMPELS U. S. TO PAY DOUBLE

Washington, July 6 (AP)—If five representatives, whose seats are contested, lose them at the regular December session, they and the contestants each will be paid full salaries from March 4.

If the contestants lose, however, they also will lose the salaries, but can be paid as much as $2000 each for their trouble.

The House rules on contested elections provide for such payment under laws passed 50 years ago.

The election of Mrs. Ruth Owen, daughter of William Jennings Bryan, and widow of an English army officer, in the Fourth Florida district, is being contested by William C. Lawson, who contends she lost her littizenship and right to hold office by marrying an alien.

Should the charge be sustained by the House, Mrs. Owen would receive pay at the rate of $10,000 a year from March 4, to the date her seat was declared vacated, and could receive $2000 for expenses.

Lawson also would receive back pay from the beginning of the 71st Congress, and $2000 for expenses, but if he loses, all he could receive would be the expense money, while Mrs. Owen's salary would run right along.

Hub Aviator Freed as Reckless Driver

Old Orchard Beach, Me., July 6—Lester E. Shealy of Boston was discharged on a charge of reckless operating of a motor vehicle, the aftermath of a crash of a biplane on the beach last Saturday, after a hearing before Judge Wesly M. Mewer in Old Orchard police court.

Shealy testified that the crash of the plane was due to a defective wheel, the defect having been checked up by experts at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology after parts of the wreckage were sent to them.

Young Plan Means Slavery, Says Critic

Berlin, July 7 (AP)—With an editorial introduction declaring "the Young plan must not become a reality," the newspaper Der Tag, Nationalist organ, today issued a special four-page supplement comprising a detailed consideration of the plan by an economist named Dr. Paul Bang. Headlines describe the Young plan as "no relief from the Dawes plan, but slavery for generations."

New York, July 6 (AP)—Katsuhiko Hamaguchi, eldest son of the prime minister of Japan, is working as a clerk in the Bank of Japan here as part of a study of economic conditions and America's prosperity. He is 32 years old. Once he was Japan's intercollegiate champion at jiu jitsu.

AIR-RAIL LINE WILL START TOMORROW

New York, July 6 (INS)—Itinerary of the first 48-hour rail air service between New York and the Pacific Coast, operated by the Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., in connection with the Pennsylvania railroad and the Santa Fe railway, was announced today.

The service will be inaugurated with impressive ceremonies. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, in California, will press an electric button at 7:00 p. m., New York daylight saving time, Sunday evening and at his signal "The Airway Limited" will leave the Pennsylvania station for Columbus on the first leg of the transcontinental trip.

On the train's arrival at Ft. Columbus Monday, Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont will press another electric button at Washington which will start the first Westbound plane.

VICTIM DYING, SHOOTER HELD

As his brother-in-law, Joseph Solomine, lay dying in Haymarket Relief Hospital today from bullet wounds inflicted in a fight in a house in Sumner st., Revere, Rocco Bonwanniello of Grant st., South Braintree, was arraigned in Chelsea district court on a charge of assault with intent to murder and held in $10,000 for a hearing next Monday.

The fight occurred in the presence of three young children, who became hysterical from fright.

Giorvanniello was found by police hiding in shrubbery near the house in which the fight took place.

Before lapsing into unconsciousness Solomine told the police his brother-in-law made an unprovoked assault upon him. The prisoner says he was attacked by Solomine and fired in self-defense.

Revoke Licenses of 131 Sportsmen

The sporting or trapping licenses of 131 individuals were revoked in Massachusetts during the month of June by the director of the division of fisheries and game, following their conviction of violating the fish and game laws in the courts of the state. Fines ranging from $3 to $75 were paid by those convicted, the total of the fines amounting to $1953.20.

U. S. Dist.-Atty Tarr May Get Vacancy

Frederick H. Tarr, U. S. district attorney in Boston, may be chosen to succeed Mabel Walker Willebrandt as national director of prohibition enforcement.

Dispatches from Washington indicate that the Boston attorney is highly regarded for the efficiency with which his office has been administered and his zeal views regarding the National Prohibition Act.

Atty-Gen. Mitchell has been quietly investigating several U. S. district attorneys whose names have been submitted for consideration in connection with the appointment of a successor in Mrs. Willebrandt and Dist. Atty. Tarr is considered foremost among the relatively small list of eligibles.

Congress, at its next session, will be asked to transfer the general supervision of national prohibition enforcement from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice. Under the present law the last named department now conducts only the prosecution of violations of the prohibition and narcotic laws.

Harvester Company President Resigns

Chicago, July 6—Acceptance of the resignation of Alexander Legge as president of the International Harvester Co. has been announced here. Legge is to accept the chairmanship of President Hoover's Federal Farm Board.

100-FT. TOWERS TO BAR PLANES FROM COURSE

New York, July 6 (AP)—That "fence" that the Old Westbury Golf Club at Mineola, L. I., has been threatening to build between its course and neighboring Roosevelt field turns out to be a row of miniature Eiffel towers.

As a measure to force airplanes taking off from Roosevelt field to attain enough altitude so that golfers won't have to throw themselves to the ground to escape being hit by the landing gears, club members will soon consider contractors' bids for the erection of a row of 100-foot steel towers between the golf course and the flying field.

TOWERS 300 FEET APART.

Present plans call for placing the aerial towers 300 feet apart and connecting them with steel wires. The idea is that airplanes taking off from Roosevelt field will then have to attain at least 103 feet altitude before flying over the golf course. Heretofore, say members of the club, airplanes have flown so low that the players had to lie down to get out of the way.

A. N. Van Vleck, a club member who is a consulting engineer, has designed the towers. They will look like radio towers when they are finished, and will be painted in accordance with government rules and lighted at night. They will form a barrier 1200 feet long between the golf course and the flying field.

TESTS MADE

Several of the Roosevelt Field pilots, Mr. Van Vleck said, belong to the golf club, and they have tried it out and have demonstrated that an airplane, if it takes off from the side of Roosevelt Field farthest distant from the golf course, can be more than 100 feet up by the time it reaches the links. Wilmer Stultz, transatlantic flier who was killed last week, was a member of the club.

"The management of the field has tried to co-operate with us and has ordered pilots to taxi over to the opposite side of the field when they take off in the direction of our course," Mr. Van Vleck said. "But the pilots won't obey the order."

Daniel F. Holmes Dies in Winchester

Daniel F. Holmes, 77, a retired member of the trucking firm of Moulton and Holmes of Boston, died at the Winchester Hospital after a brief illness. Mr. Holmes was born in Buxton, Me., and received his education in the public schools of that town.

He was past president of the Master Truckman's Association, past worshipful master of the Adelphi Lodge of Boston and attended the Unitarian Church. His wife, Mrs. Mary Louise Holmes, and one son, Walker B. Holmes of this town, survive him.

Funeral services will be held at Mr. Holmes' residence Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Newton to Turn Out at Zoning Hearing

Residents of Newton in large numbers are expected to be out at a series of hearings to be held at City Hall next week on a proposal to change nearly all land in the city now in the general residence zone to the private residence zone, thus reducing the areas in which apartment houses may be built.

The hearings will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. It is expected a great deal of opposition to the project will be expressed.

Father and Son Jailed in Thefts

Rochester, N. H., July 6—Herbert Merrill and his father, both of Rochester, were confined at the county jail, unable to secure $400 bonds in which they were held by Judge Felker in municipal court to await the action of the September grand jury.

Valuable antique articles stolen from the summer home of Mrs. Abbie Cawley of West Milton were located at a dealer's store at Wells, Me.

Funds From Abroad Aid to Palestine

Geneva, July 6 (AP)—Money forwarded to Palestine by Jewish communities abroad, and profits of the tourist traffic in Palestine, were stated by High Commissioner Sir John Chancellor today to compensate for the deficit in the trade balance of that country.

Sir John told the mandates commission of the League of Nations that imports into Palestine were ($70,515, compared with exports of only (1,487,207.

JOHN D. ACTIVE ON EVE OF 90TH BIRTHDAY

New York, July 6—Still hale and hearty, John D. Rockefeller will celebrate his 90th birthday at his Pocantico Hills estate at Tarrytown, N. Y., Monday.

He will observe this milestone in his life quietly. Guards at the tall iron gates of his secluded estate will see that only a few expected guests and relatives are admitted to the grounds.

John D. will not allow the fact that Monday will be his birthday to interfere with his daily round of golf. He will play eight holes—no more, no less. He figures that any more than that would be imposing a physical strain, and he has learned how to take care of himself.

He will live well beyond the 100-year mark the way he is living. Thirty-eight persons out of 100,000 live out a full century, insurance company statisticians say, and there is every indication that John D. will be one of that class.

Rockefeller passed through his health "crisis" some 20 years ago. He suffered considerably from stomach trouble.

But, what with dieting, golf, medical care and the right amount of relaxation, he probably is in as good physical condition today as he was at 70.

135 Haverhill Boys Off to C. M. T. C.

Haverhill, July 6—Many Haverhill boys have gone to various citizens' military training camps, including Ft. Adams, near Newport, R. I.; Ft. McKinley, Me.; Ft. Ethan Allen, Vt., and Camp Devens. Out of a total of 135, 23 have gone to Ft. McKinley, 100 to Ft. Adams, eight to Ft. Ethan Allen, four to Camp Devens.

Congratulations, Colonel

HUMIDITY HIGH ALL OVER N. E.

Barometric pressure has increased over the eastern part of the country and adjacent waters of the Atlantic Ocean, while the depression over the interior of the country has increased in energy. This has resulted in the increasing humidity along the middle and north Atlantic coast regions with foggy conditions from Rhode Island to the region south of Newfoundland.

During the last 24 hours showers have again occurred extensively from the plains states eastward to the Atlantic Ocean, although at a considerble number of stations no precipitation was reported. There was rainfall in excess of one inch in parts of Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, western Florida and Connecticut.

Lynn Labor Leader Found Not Guilty

After four continuances, a verdict of not guilty was handed down today in the case against William A. Neelley, Lynn labor leader, and Mrs. Effie Hurd, arrested in Danvers on a statutory charge.

Judge Hill of Salem gave a lengthy decision, in which he said grave doubt existed as to the allegations of Patrolmen Asa Darzney and Chester Morley.

The labor leader is now being sued for $50,000 for alienation of affections by Robert Hurd, now in California.

Southerner Heads Orthopedic Body

London, July 6 (AP)—Dr. Willis Campbell of Memphis, Tenn., was elected president of the American Orthopedic Association today.

Dr. A. Bruce Gill of Philadelphia was elected vice-president; Dr. John L. Porter of Chicago, treasurer, and Dr. DeForest Willard of Philadelphia, secretary.

Lindy Essayists Off for Capital Tonight

When the Eastern Steamship liner sails from India wharf for New York city tonight it will have 12 boys and girls of the Boston American Lindbergh Club and their parents aboard, bound for a week's sight-seeing tour to Washington.

The children are making the trip as guests of the Lindbergh Club because they wrote the 12 best essays on "What Lindy Means to Me." They will be gone a week. Leaving Boston via boat they will be met in New York city tomorrow morning by a large Mohawk motor coach, in which they will make a through trip to Washington with stop-overs in Philadelphia and Baltimore. On the return trip the party will stop-over for a night in New York city for a sight-seeing trip along Broadway and other points of interest.

ANSWERING LETTERS

Several days ago the Lindbergh Club announced the offer of a ride in a real airplane to the boys and girls of the club who would be willing to give a few minutes of their time and a little effort. Several hundred replies were received before all arrangements could be made. Now the plans are complete and if YOU wrote in asking for information you will receive a letter, perhaps today, giving you the full details.

There is no catch to the offer. All that is asked is the children give part of their time for a day or so to a little effort. It really is easy to earn the ride. In fact, several boys and girls called at the Lindbergh Club office and learned about the offer personally. Two days later they earned the ride.

To these boys and girls we might say that they will be notified in a few days about the time of the trip and all details. The flights will be made only under the most favorable weather conditions and in a Travel-Air monoplane. The plane which costs $13,000 is outfitted very elaborately. It has dual control and is the latest type of plane in commercial aviation as well as pleasure flying.

There still is time for more boys and girls of the Lindbergh Club to take advantage of this offer. It is a chance that many adults would like but we can not accept them as they are not members of our club.

If you want a ride in this plane write to secretary of Lindbergh Club, P. O. Box 185, Boston, at once for information as to how you can earn it. You will be surprised how easy it will be to get the trip.

MORE NAMES FOR HATS

Here's another list of names of boys and girls of the Lindbergh Club who will receive a Lindy aviation hat free if they write to the Lindbergh Club within one week. Each day a list of names will be published until our supply of hats is exhausted. Watch for your name.

Scranton, Pa., July 6 (AP)—The American National Esteddfod Association at a meeting here today voted to accept the invitation of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce to conduct the sessions of the National Esteddfod in Chicago in 1933 in connection with "The Century of Progress" Fair.

Mrs. Hoover Finds Joy in a Capital July

Washington, July 6 (AP)—Midsummer days in Washington seem to hold no terrors for the President and the first lady of the land.

Mrs. Hoover is a pleasant midsummer picture as she goes from place to place, her white hair and clear white complexion and bright blue eyes set off by down-turning white hats and white or light-colored costumes. One particularly attractive dress in which she has frequently appeared is a soft summer silk with dots of black in two sizes, the V-shaped neck of the bodice showing two cascades formed by two tri-cornered pieces of white silk, which begin at the shoulders and cross at a low waistline, the outer edges falling into soft folds.

Her white panama hat has a brim quite wide enough to shield her face and shows a tri-color band to correspond with her frock. Crepes, crepe de chine, summer silks and other such fabrics in light shades form her daytime dresses, while chiffons and georgette crepes are reserved for the evening.

One of the drives which President and Mrs. Hoover like best takes them up the river road past the Little falls, where Daniel Webster went fishing when his official duties kept him in Washington, frequently accompanied by John F. Crampton, the British minister, who carried along his sketch box, as well as his fishing tackle.

It was out in this direction, also, that John Quincy Adams walked almost daily from his lodgings to the naval observatory to see the great ball drop from its suspended position above the dome of the observatory precisely at noon, thus giving the watch setting time to Washington and Georgetown residents. He is said to have taken delight in arriving just as the huge black ball dropped.

Watertown Clubs Send Tots to Camp

The Watertown board of health and several local organizations have made it possible for 18 underweight children of the town to be sent to the Sharon Heights health camp for the summer.

The American Legion, Elks, Rotary club, Columbia club, Emblem club and the Watertown branch of the Massachusetts Catholic Women's Guild contributed to the expense of sending the children to the camp.

RUNS INTO CAR; IS DYING

Apparently misjudging distance, Max Grossman, 42, of 1651 Blue Hill ave., Dorchester, today, while running for a trolley in front of his home, crashed into the vehicle, losing his right ear and suffering a fractured skull, with other injuries.

Grossman, standing on his own steps, saw the trolley approaching and ran to the corner of Norfolk st. to catch it. Instead of slowing down as he neared the trolley, Grossman continued to run. He was thrown to the street, where police picked him up unconscious and sent him to City Hospital. His name is on the danger list.

6 MONTHS FOR NON-SUPPORT

John Richards of Washington st., Cambridge, thinks that $12.50 is too much to give to his wife every week for the support of herself and her son, John, he told Judge Arthur P. Stone in Cambridge court today.

Judge Stone differed, however, when Richards appeared before him charged by his wife with non-support. His order for Richards to pay this sum met with objection and a six months' sentence in the House of Correction was imposed.

Richards appealed and was held in $1500. Since last April, his wife charged, Richards has given her only $30.

Mayoress Gives Gift Coal to Charity

A few days ago Marchioness Townshend, mayor of King's Lynn in England, remarked casually to Morris Stevens of a Lynn coal firm that she had received scores of unique gifts.

"I have everything except a ton of coal," she laughingly remarked. Today a truck drove up to the front door of the New Ocean House and its driver called for the popular woman mayor. The management was surprised, but the Marchioness saw the humorous aspect of the gift.

The coal was accepted by the visiting mayor on condition that she could turn it over to a local charitable institution.

HORSES WORTH $100,000 DIE

West Chester, Pa., July 6 (AP)—Eleven horses valued at more than $100,000 were burned to death today when fire destroyed the main section of the stock barn of Delchester Farms, half way between here and Newton Square.

Six of the horses were jumpers imported from England two months ago by William Ashton, a broker, whose father, Dr. Thomas G. Ashton, owns the farm. Three blood mares and a champion stallion, owned by Dr. Ashton, and Rutledge, a famous breeding stallion owned by A. C. Harvey, Newton Square, were also burned.

Property damage was estimated at $20,000.

Howley and St. Louis — Der Max Wonders
Dan Should Worry — $200,000 in Hockey
Proved Self Real Pilot — Playground Pitchers

DAN WILL NOT HAVE TO LOOK LONG FOR JOB

THE wolves of St. Louis are after Dan Howley. The most successful A. L. manager that village has known for years and years is having his troubles. He is threatening to retire. And when Dan threatens, he goes through. He's constructed that way.

Dan, it seems, is being bothered by some of the stock holders—the boys who are the bane of baseball managers: they're like the old grads to college coaches—always butting in where they have neither the knowledge nor the ability to help.

St. Louis has been a tough spot in both big leagues. It is whispered year after year that the teams will be moved. The time is ripe now. The Cardinals in first place, draw a few thousand fans at a Sunday ball game. The Browns, battling in a double header with the Tigers, play to less than 5000. That isn't big league.

The magnates would move the clubs, but they can't find the spots. The National League would give its charter for a chance at the lucrative gates of Detroit. But owner Navin has the town sewed up. There has been talk of moving into Canada, and the enormous dry tourist trade there, as well as the size of a couple of the cities, makes the idea more feasible each year.

Many a Club Ruined

The history of the game will show many a good ball club ruined by dictation from owners and stockholders who could not let their managers look after the baseball end of things. The great Red Sox machine of the Carrigan days was wrecked because the treasury was low.

Jim Gaffney undid his 1914 champion Braves by stepping on a couple of Stallings' ideas. The present Brooklyn club is a roaring example. Uncle Wilbert Robinson, who knows his baseball, is tied in a straitjacket by Steve McKeever, who owns half the stock.

The smart owners get good managers and let them work. If the managers don't deliver, they gather the breezes. No owner in history has been a success at moulding a ball club contrary to his own managerial advice.

St. Louis has more managerial troubles than any other five cities. The Cards have won two pennants in four years, but have had four managers. Phil Ball of the Browns always does have bother with as skippers. Howley and everybody else knew a jam would come some day. Speaks well for Daniel's diplomacy that it has been averted so long.

Mister Howley of Weymouth had one good break. He was allowed to stay long enough to prove that he knows how to build as well as run a ball club. He'll have no trouble catching right on.

Max Must Wonder

Max Schmeling of Germany, still a bit of a stranger in these parts, must wonder continually what all the hubbub is about. The interpreters tell Max one day that he is matched with Sharkey; the next, that the row is called off.

Max knows that Bulow, his first manager, signed everything in this country but the new issue of currency. But it must occur that it's strange such matters aren't settled quickly.

Max, of course, does not know the highly technical art of ballyhooing, nor can any stranger, and very few citizens, understand just how boxing bodies and individuals tangle simple matters up and war about dignity and a lot of other rot.

Peering through the word screen, one comes to the conclusion that Schmeling may not fight in New York in September. But he will fight somewhere else, probably in Jersey. Max is ready to draw his share of a great gate, none of which must be turned over to charity. His managerial board never will let that opportunity pass.

Charlie Had Faith

The Boston Bruins cleaned up more than $200,000 last season. That's quite a "take" in any racket, especially good hockey, which stretches over only five months. Chances are the team will make as much another season, and keep right on doing it. For Boston is a hockey city.

Charlie Adams knew this when he decided to promote the game here. He put in a lot of money and took a bad licking. The wise boys gave him the laugh, when he was sunk once more in his second campaign. But Charlie still smiled, and waited. Now, in five years, he has one of the best money propositions in all sport.

He was willing to gamble, and he didn't pinch. He sent good money after bad. And that is the secret of success in these promotion affairs, if you have the right article to begin with.

Buck Knows His Pitching

Buck O'Brien has been nominated to teach pitching to the youngsters who inhale their baseball on the city playgrounds. A good move for Buck and a better one for the kids. For the old Sox hero knows his pitching, and likes youngsters. They'll all have a good time.

Pitching is a high-priced profession these days. It gives the ambitious young man a shot at a fortune before the average toiler has reached the penny bank class. The boys with the proper start have the edge in the scramble to catch on. What could be fairer than having the city soften the path, and help them on their way?

Two Twi Games Today; Two Tomorrow

QUINCY IS SEEMING WINNER

By DICK McSWEENEY

TWO games today and two more tomorrow is the story gleaned from a glance at the Twi League schedule.

The frays today bring Reading to Quincy and Dorchester to Salem, while Taunton is entertained at Salem and Reading visits South Boston on the morrow.

Quincy has hit a strong pace in the Twi League and all indications point to a Quincy triumph in the first half of the pennant race. Dorchester hasn't given up hope of coming through in the first half but the absence of J. Marshall and St. George's hitting slump has taken some of the club's effectiveness on a buggy ride.

READING hasn't snapped out of its lethargy yet although the new owner of the club, George L. Douzelis, promises to change all that.

Zarkow will toss for Reading when Quincy is met at Fore River Field this afternoon. If his mates give him any kind of support in the field and do anything with Mahoney's delivery, Quincy's rush will be checked. Mahoney is a smart hurler, though, and there are plenty of sluggers in the Granite City lineup.

Johnson has been picked to pitch for Salem against the Dorchester club at Salem today. Dorchester is a great hitting club and with Shuman in the box today, the invading outfit is due for a win.

TENNIS TITLE PLAY JULY 15

Chicago, July 6—Outstanding tennis stars of the country will assemble at the Skokie Country Club July 15-21, for the eastern championships.

Emmett Pare, 1928 champion, will be back to defend his title, and will encounter the keenest competition from Julius Seligson, New York, number nine in national ranking; Keith Gledhill, California, singles champion and holder of the Pacific coast junior title; Ellsworth Vines, another Californian; Louis Thalheimer, former Texas star; George O'Connell, Chicago, and James Quick of Texas, from whom entries have been received.

Hendrick Bell, number 11 in national ranking; Wray Brown, Missouri valley titleholder; John Doeg, number 8, and Harris Coggeshall, Des Moines, Ia., 13th ranking player, also are expected to enter.

Women stars entered are Miss Clara Louise Zinke, defending champion; Ruth Oexman, Cincinnati, fourth in western ranking; Mrs. Reiss, Saginaw, Mich., number 2 in the West, and Miss Catherine Wolf, Indianapolis, Indiana, champion.

Championships will be decided in men's and women's singles and doubles.

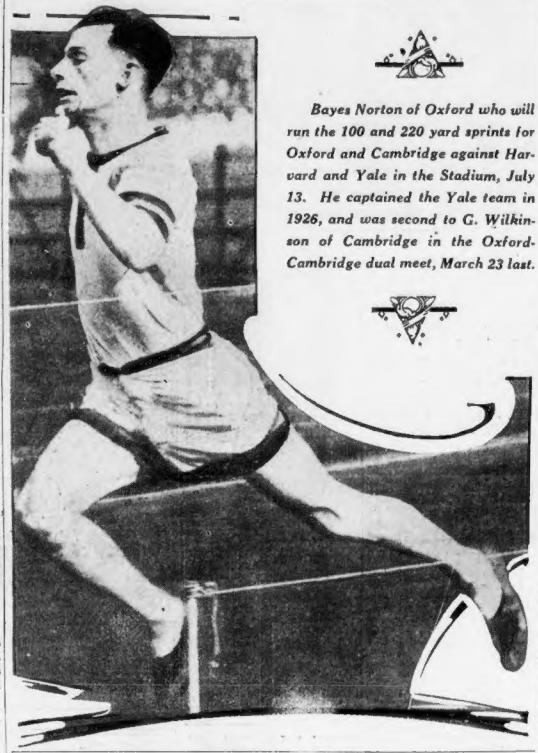
RUNS AGAINST OLD ALMA MATER



Bayes Norton of Oxford who will run the 100 and 220 yard sprints for Oxford and Cambridge against Harvard and Yale in the Stadium, July 13. He captained the Yale team in 1926, and was second to G. Wilkinson of Cambridge in the Oxford-Cambridge dual meet, March 23 last.

Former Yale Star on British Team

By JOHN GILLOOLY

IT may be treason but Bayes Norton of Oxford will have plenty of backers when he flies down the lanes of the Harvard Stadium a week from today in the annual international collegiate meet between Oxford-Cambridge and Harvard-Yale.

Norton will be striving to bring victory to the British combine at the same time opposing his Alma Mater and his countrymen from this side of the water.

The great work of the little sprinter when he was a member of Yale's track squad and Uncle Sam's Olympic outfit won't be forgotten, even though he's now enrolled under the colors of old John Bull.

Norton made the U. S. team that won the embroglio-of-all-nations in 1924 when he was in his sophomore year at New Haven. His showing in Paris was considered somewhat remarkable for a college youth.

NORTON was shut out in the 100-meter dash that was won by Harold Abrahams of Great Britain. Jackson Scholz, A. Perrit of New Zealand, Charley Paddock and Loren Murchison finished in order.

In the 200-meters, though, Norton nosed out Abrahams, winner of the 100, for fifth place behind Jackson Scholz, the winner; Charley Paddock, E. H. Liddell of Great Britain and George Hill.

He captained the Yale track squad of 1926 and was one of collegiatedom's best sprinters. He finished second to Henry Russell of Cornell in the intercollegiate 100 and took a third in the furlong behind Russell and a teammate, Ray Clark.

OLD Ell had one of its greatest track seasons with Norton at the helm. They finished third in the intercollegiates, a fraction of a point behind Stanford.

University of Southern California won with 35½, Stanford was second with 25½ while Yale was the best team in the East, with a total of 20 1-2 points.

The following year he decided to continue his studies at Oxford and helped in the British win over the Crimson-Blue team at Stamford Bridge that summer. Norton finished behind Al Miller of Harvard in the 100 and also got a second in the 220.

There is some skepticism concerning Norton's present ability to win both dashes in the Stadium next week. It is rumored that he isn't as fast as he used to be, although he's never broken training and isn't too old to be slipping.

HE failed to finish first in the 100-yard dash of the Oxford-Cambridge dual meet. G. Wilkinson, of Cambridge, defeated him Norton is running today at Hamilton, Ontario, and his American friends will have a chance to see what times he is capable of.

Norton should get back into his old form when he steps into the familiar confines of the stadium and he'll be favored to win both dashes inasmuch as the Harvard Yale outfit hasn't any sprinters who are out of the ordinary. The invading flash has had more experience than any of the stadium competitors and he ought to provide a few thrills for his Yankee boosters even though he should be deprived of victory, as some believe is fated.

West Medford in Tie With Winsor Club

Winsor Club of Watertown and West Medford are tied for first place in the first division of the Old Colony Tennis league for matches played in June. Winsor club won the championship last year. Belmont is leading the second division while Waban is in second place.

HUDKINS MAY GET PURSE

San Francisco, July 6 (AP)—An order temporarily restraining the State Athletic Commission from disposing of $13,000, the fine imposed on Ace Hudkins, Nebraska middleweight fighter, was issued yesterday by Superior Judge E. P. Shortall.

The commission was summoned to show cause, on July 12, why the order should not be made permanent.

Purses of Hudkins and Charley Belanger, Canadian light-heavyweight, were held up after their 10-round bout here June 28, because it was claimed they "didn't fight."

At a commission meeting last Wednesday $13,000 of Hudkins' guarantee of $15,000 was forfeited, the balance being allowed him for training expenses.

Belanger was allowed $1,000 for expenses and the rest of his money, amounting to about $1,500, was held up by the commission.

Collegians Battle in Nassau Tennis

Glen Cove, N. Y., July 6 (INS)—Four collegians, Kenneth Appel, John Doeg, Gregory Mangin and Bradshaw Harrison, will meet today in the semi-final round of the Nassau County Club invitation tennis meet.

Senators and Robins Open Olean Stadium

Olean, N. Y., July 6 (INS)—Olean fans are still talking this morning of the first glimpse of major league baseball in three years. The Washington Senators defeated Brooklyn 8 to 6 here yesterday at the opening of the new Bradner stadium despite the six-run lead piled up by the Robins in the first inning.

BRAVES IN POOR SHAPE AS SECOND INVASION OF WEST STARTS

By JOE CASHMAN

THE second Western invasion of the Wigwam begins this afternoon, when Chicago's pennant-contending Cubs open a four-day engagement with the Braves. Following Joe McCarthy's troupe, will come the Reds, Pirates and Cardinals, in the order named, each for four days.

The Tribe is in poor physical condition to take on such opposition, all of which, with the exception of Cincinnati, is of first division caliber.

Welsh, Maranville and Dugan are out with injuries and a few more of the regulars are in need of a rest. Bobby Smith, the club's best hurler is playing shortstop, and another of the box artists would have to take a crack at fly-chasing should anything happen to the current regular garden trio.

Judge Fuchs, however, has found Jack Slattery combing the highways and byways in search of talent, and is confident that "Sista" will return with a few "boy wonders" in short order.

And those of the team who are fit to play, promise to carry on and hold their own against the enemy until the relief brigade arrives.

There is nothing to indicate that they will succeed. At full strength, they won only three out of 12 games when the boys from the wide open spaces last visited Allston, but they think they will, which is half the battle, and may do it, if they continue to fight as they did against the Giants.

THE Cubs promise to be a bit crippled at the Teepee, too. Hack Wilson, heavy-hitting outfielder, played the role of baseball's champion pugilist on the Fourth by substituting his fists for his black bat and slugging the shins instead of the deliveries of Pitchers Kolp and Donahue of the Reds.

He has not been punished as yet, but it is almost certain that he will be set down officially for a few days.

Manager McCarthy has Cliff Heathcote, a mighty fine fly-chaser, to take Wilson's place, but Hack's mighty drives will be missed, just the same, if he is suspended.

MISTER McCARTHY isn't predicting any pennant for his team. He was cured of that habit two years ago when his Cubs had a commanding lead late in August only to end up in third place.

But his club is now only a fraction of a game removed from the top, has lost less games than any of its rivals, which is most important, and looks to be a very good pennant bet, even if Pilot Joe is silent regarding such things.

The visitors pack a powerful punch with such sluggers as Hornsby, Cuyler, Wilson, Stephenson and Grimm and boast some mighty fine hurlers including Charlie Root, Sheriff Blake, Artie Nehf, Pat Malone, Guy Bush and Mike Cvengros.

It doesn't shape up very strong in the field, especially on the left hand side of the infield, but its great hitting and pitching more than makes up for all of its defects.

ROGERS HORNSBY, who, though nobody likes to remember it, was manager of the Tribe last year, got off to a very poor start in Chicago. He was so weak at the bat for a while that he lost the honored clean-up position to Hack Wilson and the rabid Windy City fans started to ride him quite hard.

About ten days ago, though, the "Rajah" got the aim and what he has done to opposing pitchers since is just too bad. He has been the game's greatest slugger over that period, increasing his average from the .300 mark to nearly .400.

He is now the third leading hitter in the league and if he keeps up his present pace much longer, he will be the leading hitter in both leagues.

He hopes to gain first place while here just to show the natives that while he may not be a successful manager, he is one of the greatest batsmen the game has ever seen.

The return of Hornsby to form has boosted the Cubs' pennant stock considerably, the critics explaining that since the team stayed at or near the top while the "Rajah" was in a slump, it ought to go away out in front now that he is hitting on high again, which sounds logical, anyway.

BOBBY SMITH or Ed Brandt would hurl today for the Tribe under ordinary conditions, but Smith can't pitch and play shortstop and Brandt, a southpaw, would be flirting with death taking the firing line against the Cubs with their seven regular right-handed batters.

So Ed Delaney is down to get the assignment with Guy Bush serving 'em up for the hostiles.

Sunday Twin Bill for Lynn Fans

By CHARLES HOFFMAN

LYNN fans are in for a treat tomorrow at the Lynn Stadium when Manchester comes to the Shoe City for a double-header, the first game starting at 2 o'clock. The other Sabbath games listed are Lewiston at Brockton, Portland at New Bedford and Nashua at Haverhill.

Fred Lovely, the best hitting pitcher in the league, has been released by Lynn. This leaves the club with but four pitchers. Manager Tom Whelan protested strongly against the club letting the big right-hander go but to no avail. If a flock of double headers come along the Lynn pitchers will be under a tough strain and Whelan will probably have to step in himself to save his twirlers' arms from dropping off. It must be pretty tough when a team that won the first half has to cut expenses, especially in the pitching department. Lloyd King, a pitcher signed up two days ago, has also been let go.

Jake Plummer, the Brockton home run cloutер, has at last come into his own. The Medford boy was in a bad slump the first of the season, and was hitting for but .250. Then he started to hit but an injury to his ankle sent him on the bench for three weeks. Since he has come back he boosted his average to .324. He is leading the league in home runs having 11 to his credit. This will probably be his last year in this league as scouts have been looking him over and rumors are that he is headed for the Braves.

Brockton will stage a big Boosters' Day Monday. A doubleheader having 11 to his credit will be the attraction.

Alex Hurwitz, captain of Rhode Island State College during the past season, is going great guns since he joined Brockton. He is a good ball hawk and has also played first base and pitched a few games. He is a left-hander, and Manager Art Ryan plans to use him in the box regularly as he is badly in need of a southpaw.

Sam Post, elongated first sacker of the Lynn team, will probably be back in the Eastern League if he continues his heavy hitting of the past week.

It took the Boston Braves 10 innings to defeat the Portland team, 12 to 7. Johnny Evers and Hank Gowdy got back into the game, the first named going the whole nine innings. The Braves made four home runs.

Zahniser Goes to Toronto

Toledo, O., July 6—Paul Zahniser, pitcher, has been traded by the Toronto club of the International League for Arthur Ruble, outfielder, Manager Casey Stengel of the Toledo American Association club has announced.

Lewis Favorite With Herrick Named as Referee

NOW SURE OF EVEN BREAK

By JACK CONWAY

THE selection of Frank Herrick, one of the official referees of the Rhode Island Athletic Commission, as third man in the ring for the Lewis-Sonnenberg title wrestling bout at Fenway Park on next Tuesday night caused the challenger to be installed a slight favorite in the betting.

Edward R. Foster, chairman of the Rhode Island Commission, has granted Herrick permission to referee the championship match.

Lewis refused to wrestle if Leon Burbank, who has refereed most of Sonnenberg's matches in this city, was the third man in the ring. He also refused to allow any unlicensed official to have charge of the match.

Lewis and Sonnenberg finally agreed on Herrick. Chairman Foster of the Rhode Island Commission granted permission for Herrick to come to Boston as referee.

The champion didn't make any strenuous objections to a licensed official being on the job. He is confident of victory and does not wish to leave Lewis in a position to offer an alibi if defeated.

SONNENBERG, by agreeing to risk his title against Lewis, has apparently won his way back into the good graces of the various athletic commissions who were warring on him for tackling setups.

Illinois and Pennsylvania will have members of their official families at the ringside when Gus and the Strangler whirl into action on Tuesday night.

LEWIS and Sonnenberg are in the final stages of their training grind. The Strangler was to work at Toland's Gym today and tomorrow, while Sonnenberg will wind up his training with workouts at Ferncroft Inn today and tomorrow.

With Herrick named as referee, Lewis says he is more certain than ever of victory.

"I won't get jobbed this time," said Lewis. "You won't find Herrick counting me out while I'm outside of the ropes. Sonnenberg will have to score actual falls to successfully defend his title.

"I shall once more be back on the heavyweight throne Tuesday night. I promised my bride I would win back the title and give it to her as an additional wedding present. I want to make the little lady happy."

NOW that a licensed referee has been placed in charge of the bout and the affair has been okayed by the various athletic commissions, public interest in the match is increasing.

The advance sale has soared past the $40,000 mark and Tex Rickard's prediction of a gate of more than $100,000 no longer appears like an idle dream.

Sonnenberg and Lewis drew $78,000 at the Boston Garden last January. The show was a sellout with a $7 top.

For next Tuesday night there will be more than twice the seating capacity there is at the Garden, while the top price for tickets is $10.

Peter Patch Is Houlton Winner

Houlton, Me., July 6—Thrilling races with whipping finishes marked the closing day of the opening meeting of the Maine and New Brunswick Circuit. Aroostook County race-goers have seen few better races than the junior free-for-all.

Early Todd, the Houlton pacer, pleased the home crowd by winning the first heat in a desperate drive with all four horses neck and neck. The next heat saw a change with Peter Patch collaring Early Todd and taking the lead, as they came into the home stretch, Peterkin beating Early Todd in another hot drive to the wire for second position, but being unable to reach Peter Patch.

Boston Yacht Wins Race on Sound

PORT WASHINGTON, L. I., N. Y., July 6—In a moderate breeze, that came from the southwest, a fleet of approximately 110 boats sailed in the 55th annual regatta of the Knickerbocker Yacht Club, which was also one of the regular championship races of the Long Island Sound Yacht-Racing Association.

The race marked the third successive title event held for Long Island Sound Corinthians in the last three days.

Rear Commodore Junius S. Morgan's Windward again showed herself able in moderate weather, beating Commodore Floyd L. Carlisle's Avatar which had been making a clean sweep of the competition in the M. class. Windward's skipper had his big gray sloop working into a lead shortly after the start and held his advantage to the finish, sailing a course of 15¼ miles.

He led Avatar across the finish line by more than five minutes, one of the worst defeats taken this season by the Carlisle sloop. George M. Pynchon's Istalena was third, only a minute astern of Avatar, while Simba brought up the rear, being almost 10 minutes astern of the winner.

In the other large classes, Louis G. Shields' Pampero was first to finish in the New York 40-foot class. Rob Mahlstedt's Mirage continued her sweep in the Larchmont O Class, chalking up her third successive victory in three days.

The 10 meters were out in full force, nine crossing the starting line, but with the finishes widely strung out. Gilbert Ottley's Falcon managed to defeat Valencia, sailed by her owner, Jack B. Sheridan by 47 seconds, but Synthetic, sailed by Roy Manny, trailed the fleet by 19 minute margin.

Frank C. Paine of Boston sailed his Gypsy home first in the Intercolonial eight-meter class, while Scapa III, H. D. Savage, and W. H. Wheller's Bob Kat and J. K. Roosevelt's Gitana, won respectively in the R Class and the eight-meter one design group.

Paine's victory in the International eights marks him as one of the contenders for the selection of the American defender for the Seawanhaka Cup next September.

Gypsy had previously proven herself to work best under moderate conditions and given just the sort of weather she liked, her skipper worked her skilfully in a shifting breeze. It was not until the final climb on the wind that Gypsy showed her supremacy then increased her lead over Mab to 4 minutes 12 seconds.

Athletics Prepare for World Series

Philadelphia, July 6 (INS)—That John D. Shibe, vice-president of the league-leading Athletics, believes in his ball club was revealed here today when it was announced that he had contracted for the construction of 700 additional box seats at Shibe park, the home of the White Elephants.

Sun Edwin Victor at Empire City

New York, July 6—The Arden Farm's Sun Edwin, making his second start in less than a week, today won the Empire City handicap and $6250, as the Empire City race track opened its summer meeting. J. Livingston's Reconstruction was a length back for second, with R. T. Wilson's Sun Fire, third. Sun Edwin stepped the mile-and-a-quarter in 2:05 3-5.

LYNN RIFLEMEN LEAD LEAGUE

The Lynn Rifle and Revolver Club is now topping the 11 clubs of the Eastern Massachusetts Rifle League with four victories and no setbacks, while the Braintree Guards Association Rifle Club is in second place, with three wins and one defeat. The Middlesex Rifle Club of Lincoln, for four years the league champion; the Lincoln Sportsmen's Association and the United Shoe Machinery Athletic Association Gun Club are knotted for third place.

Five important league matches are slated for this afternoon. Middlesex and United Shoe will shoot on the former's range in Lincoln; Lynn will take on Garden City of Beverly at Lynn; Arlington will go to Reading; Lincoln will face Braintree at Braintree, and Ames will entertain Wannalancit of Lowell at North Easton. The Framingham club will be idle.

Big Upsets Mark Clay Court Tennis

Indianapolis, Ind., July 6—J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., sprang a surprise in the quarter finals of the National clay court tennis tournament, when he defeated Fritz Mercur of Bethlehem, Penn., 7—5, 4—6, 6—4, 7—5. Mercur is the seventh ranking player of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Another unexpected result was the defeat administered by Emmett Pare of Chicago to Herbert Bowman of New York City, by scores of 7—5, 7—5, 6—2.

Hartnett Back In Cubs Lineup Today

(INS)—Gabby Harnett, one of the best catchers in baseball, is ready for play, according to Joe McCarthy, manager of the Chicago Cubs, who arrived in Boston this morning from Buffalo, where he spent Friday with his family.

Hartnett has been unable to play all year owing to an ailing shoulder. The Cubs open a series with the Braves here today.

Braddock Trains to Offset Jabs

WOLLASTON IN GOLF LEAD

Wollaston was leading with five victories and no defeats, lost at the record day's play of the South Shore Women's Golf League began. Wollaston attained five points through default of the Brockton team. Crow Point won every match with Scituate, but was forced to default one match, as Mrs. Jacobs could not play.

Hatherly won a 3-to-2 decision over Stony Brae at the latter's course, while Duxbury defeated South Shore by the same score. The feature in yesterday's matches was the par of 85's turned in by Elkins and Winifred Peterson of Crow Point, Elinor Peterson triumphing over Mrs. A. White of Scituate, 6 and 5, while Winfield managed to win from Mrs. F. A. Flanders, 8 and 6.

Mabholz Wins Turnfest Swim

Fitchburg, July 6—At the New England Turnfest for the German societies of Springfield, Warren and Manchester at Lake Whalom, Lunenberg, Hans Mabholz of the Springfield Red Cross won the distance swim by 20 yards over William Meier of Lawrence and Carl Gustafson of Fitchburg. The 50 yards swim for women was won by Martha Bernhardt of Lawrence. Ruth Anderson of Fitchburg was second and Mildred Hernsdorf of Manchester, N. H., was third.

McStay of Newton in Dilboy Show

PAT McSTAY, sensational 118-pounder from Newton, who conquered Gordon Faulkner of Somerville at the last Dilboy Post tourney, has again entered for that organization's tournament, being held next Wednesday night, at Dilboy Field, Somerville. As Faulkner is already entered, a most interesting bout should develop if these two boys happen to come together.

Al Dean, of Medford, is another favorite who will again be present. Dean is considered by many as being one of the finest heavyweight prospects now in the amateur ranks and is given the edge to win his class over several other heavies.

Johnnie Miller, another Medford boy who created a sensation by kayoing three opponents in a row at the last tourney, will find the going a little harder this time as several well known middleweights are also entered.

Classes to be competed are the 135 pounds for novices and the following open divisions, 118, 126, 147, 160 pounds and the heavyweights. Entries for these classes may be mailed to Dilboy Post, V. F. W., headquarters, Knights of Columbus building, Highland ave., Somerville. Reservations may also be made at this address.

Another Hole-in-1 Player Appears

Poland Spring, Me., July 6—Myron Also of New York city made a hole-in-one here on the 210-yard 16th hole. He was playing a foursome composed of Nathan Baum of Philadelphia, Charles Epstein of Wilkes Barre, Pa., and Simon Rosenau of Philadelphia.

British Are Leading in Senior Golf Play

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 6—Great Britain had rolled up a commanding lead over the United States and Canada at the conclusion of foursome play in the International seniors golf competition. Great Britain tallied 11 points to 5 for the United States and four for Canada.

Maine Tennis Tourney Aug. 17

Squirrel Island, Me., July 6—The Maine State tennis championships under the sanction of the United States Lawn Tennis Association will be held in conjunction with the annual tournament of the Squirrel Island Athletic Association here during the week of Aug. 17 to 24. The championships to be decided are men's singles, men's doubles, and women's singles.

Edward H. Bonelli is in charge of the tournament and entries must be filed with R. Howard Wardwell of the Squirrel Island Athletic Association by August 16. Tournaments also are being conducted for boys and girls beginning August 14, who have not reached their 15th year.

ZERAMBY GETS TEST FROM ROUTIS

With the remarkable record of 36 victories in 37 bouts and with four straight ring conquests since he deserted the preliminary ranks, the spectacular rise of Jake Zeramby, 19-year-old Lynn schoolboy, will be given another test next Monday night at the Boston Garden, where he clashes with Andre Routis of France, featherweight champion of the world.

It's quite a task that they have cut out for the popular Lynn Hebrew, yet no less an authority on the boxing game than Al Lacey of Chelsea, who is training him for this bout, expects him to score a victory. Lacey, trainer of Jack Sharkey and former trainer of the U. S. Olympic team, predicts that Zeramby will develop into one of the most sensational fighters in the game within a few months.

FOUGHT WAY TO TOP

A brilliant boxer with a hard left hand punch, Zeramby has carved a road to the top of the heap by consecutive victories over Johnny Farr, Chick Suggs, Cowboy Eddie Anderson and Sammy Fuller. In Routis, however, he will face an opponent of a much different type, a fighter who never allows his opponent to get set, and a real dangerous hitter.

The smiling French boy, who won his title from the hard punching Tony Canzoneri, is in the Hub and confidently says that he expects to stop Zeramby Monday night. Routis expects his experience in the ring to turn the tide against the ambitious Lynn youngster. The champion will step through a hard training session today at Kelly & Hayes' gym and it is expected that a big crowd will be on hand. Routis is one of the busiest fighters in the ring today and his aggressiveness has carried him to many victories.

SCHMELING IN CORNER

The presence of Max Schmeling, German heavyweight champion, who will be in Routis' corner for this bout is an event in itself. Schmeling will come to the Hub tomorrow night accompanied by William C. Carey, Madison Square Gardens promoter. Eddie Mack expects to tie Schmeling to a new contract for a bout here in August during the German's presence in this city.

Schmeling and Routis, in addition, to their comfortable friends are under the same management.

A brilliant preliminary card of all-featherweight contests supports the main event with Eddie Curley of the West End meeting Sammy Chesloff of Lynn in the eight round semifinal. Terry Parker of the North End opposes Jimmy Brisco of Cambridge and Johnny Daley of Waltham, former amateur champion, faces Al Rackow of Winthrop.

In three other six round bouts, Enrico Venturry of Cuba meets Joe Mack of Lynn and George Goldberg of New York takes on Tony Santello of Worcester while Johnny Moore of the North End meets Al Rowe of New York. Routis' sparring partner.

PERKINS, CULLY WIN DOUBLES

North Scituate, July 6—All play in the South Shore singles and doubles tennis championship at the Hatherly Country Club was halted shortly after the showers. A doubles match between Donald Morison and William Porter, junior state doubles champions, and Albert Horton and Charles M. Kraus of Providence, was halted with the doubles champions leading, 2—2, in the first set.

Edward Iarangioli of New York city, captain of the New York University tennis team, pounded out a well-earned victory over Morison, 6—0, 6—3, 6—2. Iarangioli, in addition to being the outstanding New York collegiate player, holds the senior Metropolitan indoor championship. Morison was playing almost the best game of his young career as he had the New York star baffled in the second set. In the third set, Morison managed to win the first two games before falling before the well-placed shots of the Metropolitan champion.

In the outstanding doubles match of the day, G. Holmes Perkins and Henry Cully, state doubles championship and leading ranking players of the tournament, disposed of A. L. Roberts and G. Kitchen, 6—4, 6—0. In the first set, the service of Roberts scored heavily for the losers, but Perkins and Culley tightened up and took the second set in straight games.

Critz of Reds May Be Operated On

Cincinnati, O., July 6 (INS)—A left leg swollen from spike wounds kept Hughey Critz, captain and second baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, confined today in the Bethesda hospital.

Condition of the limb made it impossible to determine the extent of Critz' injuries and it was feared an operation may be necessary. Critz was hurt both below and above the knee four days ago when Riggs Stephenson of the Chicago Cubs slid into him during a game.

SCHAAF TO BOX TONIGHT

New Haven, July 6—The 10-round bout scheduled between Ernie Schaaf of Boston and Murray Gitlits of New Haven, heavyweights, was postponed until tonight at the White City stadium, Savin Rock. This is the second postponement due to rain, as the bout was originally slated for June 28, but had to be cancelled because of the inclement weather.

Make Three World Records in Casting

Lima, O., July 6—New world's records for casting were established here at the annual convention of the Ohio Association of Angling Clubs.

Karl Kinnear of Geneva, O., broke two records. In the five-eighths ounce distanceplug he made a single cast of 278 feet. The former world record was 258. In the half-ounce distance his cast was 316 feet and the former record 306.

Al Foss of Cleveland set up a new record of 263 feet for the quarter-ounce plug. This was a single cast.

Open Skeet Shoot

The Concord Rod and Gun Club stages an open handicap skeet shoot today on its grounds, off Virginia rd., Concord. It will be a 25-bird affair, and there will be three handicap prizes, also a special prize for high scratch gunner.

LETOURNIER IN REVENGE RACE AT REVERE

Bike fans will have a big cheer for Al Letournier, the game Frenchman, when he lines up in the one hour Wiley Cup Revenge Race at the Revere Cycle Track tonight. Letournier won himself a warm place in the hearts of the fans Wednesday night by his many attempts to take the lead. Letournier made Wednesday night's race one of the best witnessed at the beach oval in years.

Tonight, Letournier will have as opponents, George Chapman of Newark, winner of four of the seven races at Revere this year; Frans Duelberg, the youthful German, who won the last contest; Francesco Zucchetti, the Italian star from Providence; and Freddie Keenan, the Revere boy, who has been returned the winner once at Revere.

VICTIM OF MISHAP

Chappie went well last Wednesday, but all the breaks were against him. Coming from behind after a poor start, he worked himself into second place and was but 10 yards from overtaking Duelberg, when a tire blew. Chapman lost five laps in changing bikes, and was out of the contest for good.

Duelberg, after taking Chappie's dust in every race he has participated in at the seashore track, went out from the start in the last race to beat the veterans. He got the start at the gun and always had a spurt left in him when he was pressed. At least every half mile after he took the lead, he was forced to fight hard to hold his position and he acquitted himself like a veteran, despite the fact that he has not ridden in more than half a dozen times.

AN IN-AND-OUTER

Keenan, of course, is always popular. Frankie is an in-and-out performer. In his first appearance he looked like a novice. Then a week later he came back and rode in front all the way. If he's right tonight, he will be right up in front.

Zucchetti will be making his 1929 debut at Revere. He has been winning with great regularity on other tracks and some of his victories at New York have been little short of sensational.

An unknown distance race for amateurs will support the feature pace race. In this event the riders must travel fast all the way and always be near the front, for they will never know when the gun is about to sound for the final lap.

MYOPIA FOUR WINS AT POLO

The polo season was opened at Hamilton when four horsemen from the Myopia Hunt Club defeated Gay Farm, composed of Dedham Polo and Country players, by the score of 12 goals to 5. The game was fast and, considering the small amount of practice which the teams have had up to the present time, the stroking and hitting of all the players was remarkable. The Myopia team was designated as the Hamiltons.

The play of J. P. Mandell, playing at the back for Hamilton, and star Harvard varsity back for the past three years, was the outstanding feature of the game. Young Mandell showed sensational form in getting the ball well out of his pony's way with splendid drives and added drive. Mandell was responsible for six of Hamilton's 12 goals.

SCHOOLBOY, 16, GOLF WINNER

Manchester, Vt., July 6—In a thrilling finish H. Law Weatherbee, 16-year-old amateur golfer of Albany, turned four down and three to go into one up, 19 holes, against the sturdy R. A. Jones, Jr., of Westchester Hills, in the second round of match play for the Robert Todd Lincoln cup, at Ekwanok Country Club.

Jones had a comfortable lead of four holes going to the 15th, but the Albany youth came through with a birdie three for a win.

At the 18th Jones saved a half only as a result of chipping up for one putt. Par fours at the last by Weatherbee squared the match, and a dead stymie at the extra hole determined the match in favor of the youth.

Rain Halts Big Line Racing

Cleveland, July 6—The Grand Circuit race card at the North Randall Park was called off because Thursday's heavy rain left the track too soft. The three postponed events are being run off today, track officials said, giving a card of six races for the final day of the meet.

Harvard Football Men in Good Scholastic Standing

87 READY TO ANSWER CALL

COACH ARNOLD HORWEEN will have few ineligibles to hamper his football progress when he greets his 1929 squad of Crimson gridmen on Monday, September 16

Harvard football players coupled athletics and scholastic work in successful manner last year. Henry W. Clark, assistant director of athletics, today announced the eligibility of 87 football men at Harvard, all of whom have played varsity, second varsity or freshman football

The list includes 17 ends, 13 tackles, 13 guards, 10 centers, 8 quarterbacks, and 26 halfbacks, all of whom are expected to report when the call for candidates is sounded.

Four ineligible players a year ago will report this fall to counterbalance the loss of a quartet who appeared of varsity calibre. William T. Wetmore, captain and quarterback of the 1927 freshman team two years ago; George N. Talbot, fullback on the freshman two years ago; Paul N. Fullam, halfback on the same eleven, and H. L. Levin, who was a tackle on the varsity squad in 1927.

Among the freshman players of promise who will be candidates for the varsity squad are Eugene Record and Vahan Mousheguian, ends; Robert M. Faxon and George Keuhn, tackles; Henry Myerson, Charles D. Draper and William K. Ginman, guards; Charles A. Cunningham, center; William B. Wood, Jr., quarterback; Capt. Ernie White, Francis J. Gilligan, Edmund A. Maya, Jr., and Charles Devens, halfbacks.

Second varsity players of last season who will be eligible in the fall are D. Lewis, Jr., and V. B. Harding, Jr., ends; Thomas G. Upton, Nathaniel Warner and R. H. Johnson, tackles; Paul Vonder Horst and Lewis F. Brown, guards, and Arthur B. Bigelow, center; John Noble, quarterback; George D. Snyder, Harry Sturgis and Robert Gilmore, halfbacks.

Unicorn Two-Mile Relay Team Wins

DENVER UNIVERSITY STADIUM, July 6—The Boston Athletic Association quartet won the two-mile relay in 7 minutes 48 4-10 seconds in the A. A. U. championships here. Lee Lermond, running anchor for the winning team, covered the last half mile in 1 minute 54 and 4 seconds, the same time in which the senior 880 was won yesterday. The Los Angeles Athletic Club, the other entrant, was fatally far in the rear

New York Athletic Club set up a new National A. A. U. record in the 3 mile relay in 16 minutes, 37 6-10 seconds. The Denver Athletic Club was a close second, largely through the great work of Ray Alf, junior record holder of the 220-yard dash, who ran as anchor man. The Illinois A. C. was third and the Los Angeles A. C. fourth. Members of the winning team are: Jackson Scholz, John Kerr, Howard Jones and Frank Cuhl. The old record was three minutes, 17 6-10 seconds, made in 1926 by the Illinois A. C.

WITH Charley Paddock running in the 440-yard relay race for the Los Angeles Athletic Club relay team, which established a new world's record in winning the 440-yard relay race. The Californians negotiated the distance in 41.9 seconds. The old record for a quarter-mile two-ten relay was 42.4

Paddock, in second place when he took the baton, came from behind to place his team three yards ahead. Maurer and Wykoff held the advantage Paddock had gained and beat the Newark (N. J.) A. C. four across the tape by a scant three yards.

25-MILE AUTO RECORD FALLS

St. Paul, Minn., July 6—The world record for a 25-mile automobile race on a one-mile dirt track was broken four times during a program at the Minnesota State fair grounds.

Charles "Dutch" Bauman of Indianapolis, won the event in 38 minutes, 8 4-5 seconds. The former record of 21 minutes, 15 3-5 seconds was set in 1916 by Fred Horly.

Doherty Retains Decathlon Title

Denver, Colo., July 6—Ben Doherty of the Cadillac A. C., Detroit, retained his A. A. U. decathlon championship, scoring 7784.68 points, a new American record.

B. & N. CREW WINS THAMES TROPHY

which hails from Cambridge, Mass., holds the schoolboy championship of New England. They are replaced what the strong Hotchkiss-Columbia University team had failed to do for the Columbia oarsmen were defeated by Trinity in last year's race.

After the defeat of the Crimson rowers the task of capturing and carrying to America the Thames cup—one of the most coveted trophies in the field of rowing—fell to the New England lads and they failed to even hope that was placed in them.

After Browne and Nichols victory over Trinity College of England, in the semi-final, at noon the Americans became a sight favorite for the final

The official time for the mile and one half shell course was seven minutes 28 seconds

Joe Welch, Jr., of Canada, holder of the diamond sculls, the most important individual trophy in Henley regatta honors, was defeated in the diamond sculls final today by L. of. F Gunther, Dutch Olympic sculler

Gunther beat the titleholder in three feet, covering the course in eight minutes 42 seconds

This was the third successive year that Wright took part in the diamond sculls final. Gunther was defeated in the semi-finals of the Olympic Games single sculls contest year by K. Meyers, an American oarsman

The husky young members of the Browne & Nichols eight will be received by United States Ambassador Charles Gates Dawes on Monday. Afterwards they will tour England under the a spices of the Brookes Wright Foundation.

The Browne and Nichols school crew was the first American team ever to win the Thames Cup. It was a popular victory and the young American oarsmen were hardly able to fight their way through the crowd after their victory.

The Yankees rowed a strong stout-hearted race. They got off to the start, but the English oarsmen spurted and by quickening their stroke came up to the boat at the quarter mile. The Americans then took the lead and were a yard ahead at the half-mile. At the three-quarters mile the Browne and Nichols team was half a boat length in the lead. They increased this lead to a boat length at the nine mark

The Yankees Rowing Club crew spurted in the last 500 yards, making a desperate effort to close the gap, but were unable to overtake their American antagonists.

"Cantabs" Beat Trinity to Get Into Finish

Henley-on-Thames, England, July 6 (AP)—Eight husky oars men from the Browne and Nichols school of Cambridge, Mass., today won the right to compete for the famous Thames cup in the final round this afternoon

The prep schoolboys, sole American entry in the regatta, today avenged the defeat of Columbia's 150-pound crew yesterday at the hands of Trinity College of Cambridge by leading the Trinity crew home in 7 minutes and 20 seconds by a slim margin of one-third of a length.

The Browne and Nichols crew qualified for the final by one of the finest spurts seen at Henley this year. The race showed excellent rowing displayed by the American oarsmen. After trailing by one-third of a length at the island station, the Americans gained three feet to 34 and drew up level with Trinity at the quarter-mile.

While the Americans kept swinging at a higher rate, Trinity, rowing even a faster stroke, answered the challenge. At the half-mile mark however Browne and Nichols took a light lead and soon were one-half length over a quarter of a length. Trinity responded with the result that the boats were level.

From then on it was a nip-and-tuck race down the spectacular mile course, with the Americans holding a slight lead at the finish.

ALLISON AND VAN RYN WIN DOUBLES

The match was a terrific struggle in which the Englishmen bitterly contested every point. The first part of the match was played in a drizzling rain and a failing light which severely handicapped both teams. The courts were like a mud bottle and while the players fought in keeping their footing. The match was the second championship contest of the day. Henri Cochet of France has since failed to contribute Jean Borotra, for the men's single crown immediately preceding the Anglo-British battle.

In the all British final of the women's doubles Mrs. M. Watson and Mrs. Peggy Michell won the title by defeating Mrs. C. B. Covell and Mrs. D. C. Shepherd Baron.

The score was 6-4, 8-6. The match was close throughout with both teams fighting hard for the honor of bringing England its first Wimbledon title this year

TWINS BREAK SWIM MARK

BERNICE AND PHYLLIS ZITENFELD

Dover, July 8—There was a lull in our training the other day, but it was not caused by Eskimo weather or anything like that.

We celebrated the Fourth by taking a short vacation and went to the Dover Swimming Club as specially invited guests

But yesterday we got back to real work and the results were most gratifying. In the first place the frigid weather that has played havoc with our plans has at last broken. The temperature has increased to 59 and the sun is shining once again

We are feeling happier than ever now and our trainer, Bill Kellingley, just radiates optimism

We will be ready to tackle the channel at the end of the month, he told us

Taking the water with Bill and Uncle Charlie rowing off Deal, we swam in great style against the tide as far as Goodwyn Sands and then back again with the tide

Kellingley clocked us and on landing whooped with joy.

Suspension and Fine for Wilson

New York, July 6 (INS)—Hack Wilson, Chicago Cub outfielder, must spend three days on the bench and pay a $100 fine for his part in an attack on the Cincinnati dugout, Thursday

This was announced today by President John A. Heydler of the National League after two days consideration of the case

150 yards from home the American stroke called on his men for a final burst and they responded in splendid style, leaving the Trinity boys far from being distressed, gave their school spurt in honor of Trinity before rowing off to the landing stage. The Trinity crew showed some distress and did not leave the post for a minute or two.

COCK-COCS

THE DOAKES FAMILY

This is Maxpert Doakes, who is being sought by the police of two continents for annoying women with sour gags. Doakes operates thus: After meeting a young lady he takes her home, and just before parting always remarks, "You're cute in a way, but you don't weigh much."

NEW YORK—Johnny O'Connor, who wrote "Broadway Racketeers," had his pocket picked while watching a police parade on Fifth ave

Says the Rev. Mr. Wiley—

And the difference between marriage and war is that war usually lasts about three years.

SPECIAL SERVICE FOR THE HOSTESS

Are you ever involved in a difficult social situation?

Do you invite guests to dinner or luncheon whom you would rather not have?

Our plan is simple and humane

All we do is arrange with Mr Frisky (above), who is a public spirited riding instructor

He takes the proposed unwelcome mutton for a brisk canter before each and every dinner or luncheon engagement.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

Mrs. Sarah Cole, 74 years old who lives in a little town near Springfield, has a pet cat. The cat brought a live mouse into the kitchen where Mrs. Cole was sitting and began to play with it. Mrs. Cole drowned with her mouth ajar. The mouse revived enough to try to escape, ran into Mrs. Cole's lap and up her waist into her mouth. Before she could prevent herself from doing so, she had swallowed the mouse

S. BOSTON NINE PLAYS CUBS

Tomorrow afternoon at Lincoln park, Somerville, the Somerville Cubs go after their 31st victory of the season when they cross bats with the fast St. Augustine nine from South Boston.

The Cubs have made a wonderful record this year under the leadership of Manager Bill Flynn and Capt. Donovan and to date have won 30 victories

They have been aided in making this record by the great infield combination composed of Capt. Donovan at first base, Corbett at second, Schultz at short and Mosquito at third.

Nelson will be in the box for the Cubs and will attempt to annex his 12th straight victory of the season Frank Donovan will be on the receiving end. Battery for St Augustines will be Martin and Murphy

The Cubs have defeated such strong teams as the Philadelphia Colored Giants and if they win tomorrow Manager Flynn will claim the semi-pro title for his team

EVENING New York Stocks AMERICAN News of Street MARKETS

TONE IS MIXED IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

The tone was mixed in Wall Street trading for the week-end. The usual Saturday profit-taking was encountered, causing numerous recessions, after which a slow rally was staged.

Allied Chemical crossed 237, establishing a new record high. U. S. Steel, which established a high mark at 200 Friday, continued to be subjected to profit taking.

Industrials showed the major recessions, while the carrier and motor issue stocks generally exhibited a good tone. Oils, coppers, steel and mining issues moved easily.

Wall Street was not concerned over the unfavorable showing of the weekly Federal Reserve statements. The increase of $48,000,000 in Reserve credit outstanding, the $108,236,000 expansion in rediscounts and the drop in the bank's reserve ratio from 75.3 per cent to 72.9 per cent were recognized as results of the heavy midyear credit and currency demands. Nor was the $227,000,000 increase in brokers' loans indicative, to the Street, of bullish sentiment, either a substantial part of this gain was due to stock and commodity hypothecating rights it has been exercised during the last week in June and on July 1.

Granby, controlled by the Consolidated Mining, Smelting & Power Co., Ltd. for the quarter ended June 30 will show the largest earnings for any quarter in its history, or about $3 per share on the 6?,000 shares of stock, before depreciation and depletion accounting to N. L. Amster, a director of the company. This would compare with earnings of $2.09 per share in the first quarter and would bring earnings for the first half year to about $5 per share.

Granby will, I think, be able to earn about $10 per share in 1929, barring any drastic reduction in the price of copper during the second half, which I do not expect," says Mr. Amster.

"The company is in strong current position, with net quick assets, cash and copper, of over $5,000,000. It is loaning money on call.

"Both producers and consumers consider an 18-cent copper market reasonable and sound and believe it wave to be opposed to a wildly fluctuating market. They prefer stability. So I feel reasonably sure that the present price of about 18 cents will be maintained.

"Developments in the Granby mines in the past year have been very favorable, particularly at the Allenby property. Not only have we been getting better grades of ore but finding very substantial ore bodies.

"These developments, of course, have not been figured in the ore reserves because the ore bodies by only proven these ore bodies by diamond drilling. Only after drifting and crosscutting can the tonnage of the ore bodies be estimated.

Another important development with Granby is has been the build up of the Bonanza mine. There, too, the company is already taking out small amounts of ore, with possibly 200 tons a day. But this is coming only from development work. There has been no stoping or cross-cutting as yet at Bonanza. Ore at this property has not been figured in the general ore reserves of Granby and will not be until drifting and cross-cutting are completed."

PENN. NET TO SET RECORD

Expectations that Pennsylvania R. R. will make a new record in net for first half of 1929 is further indicated by car loadings for June which ran substantially ahead of corresponding months of 1928 as well as 1927. Loadings for four weeks ended June 29 were 356,868 cars against 350,058 for same period of 1928, increase 56,810 or 9.2 per cent, and 664,110 in 1927, increase 42,758 or 6.4 per cent. For the half-year loadings were 4,167,646 cars, against 3,885,055 in corresponding period of 1928, increase 282,591 or 7.3 per cent; 4,168,516 in 1927, decrease 870 or 0.02 per cent, and 4,258?90 in 1926; decrease 91,193, or 2.1 per cent.

Week ended:	1929	1928	1927
June 22...	178,263	161,141	166,662
June 15...	179,063	164,918	165,253
Total ...	706,868	647,892	665,110

June has not only shown a seasonal increase but 1929 for each week has been larger than corresponding week in 1928 and 1927. Pennsylvania traffic is of massive, laneous character, and the continued heavy loadings indicate general business is satisfactory in the region served.

General Electric to Hire 28,000, Most in Its History

Schenectady, N. Y., advices today stated that by September 14, General Electric Co. will have 28,000 employes, most in its history. From 500 to 300 are being added weekly. New men will be used principally in radio, refrigerator and wire and cable departments. American Locomotive has sufficient orders to carry the full force through spring, and additional help is being added to take care of increased production.

SOVIET TRADE PACT IS SEEN ON THE WAY

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

Charles S. Dewey

Charles S. Dewey, American financial adviser to Poland, has been visiting Moscow for his second recent conference with Soviet officials. Naturally this revived rumors in State Street of an American trade agreement with the Soviets, and caused study of stocks that might be benefited thereby. On his previous visit to Warsaw, Mr. Dewey was a guest of Ignace Paderewski, pianist and premier.

How slowly an agreement would be arrived at, was perhaps indicated by Mr. Dewey's speech a year or so ago before the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts at the Boston City Club. Mr. Dewey then appeared as the defender of "government by red tape," pointing out that those who attack it are "criticising the safeguards devised by a long list of Governmental officials, who have discovered that a somewhat slower and steadier progress is the surest way."

The "eight" is following the trend noted in this column at the start of the year, when we published the prediction that it would grow rapidly in favor among automobilists. Registration in eighteen leading cities of eight-cylinder cars priced above $1000 in the first four months of 1929 showed an increase of 82 per cent. over the same period of the previous year, while total registration of six-cylinder cars priced above $1000 in the same period declined 8 per cent., as compared with the same months of 1928, according to a compilation made by the Studebaker Corporation. Registration of eights above $1000 totaled 17,239 for the first months against 9492 in the same period last year. Registration of sixes above $1000 were 42,165 against 49,179 in the first four months of 1928.

To test the reliability of this compilation, Studebaker compared registrations of eights and sixes above $1000 in eight leading states The average increase in registration of eights over the same four months of the previous year was 90 per cent., as compared with a decrease of 13 per cent. in the registration of sixes on the same basis.

• • •

As a final test in counties, none of which contained a metropolitan city, were selected by Studebaker and registrations compared on the above basis. Six-cylinder registrations of cars over $1000 showed an increase of 13 per cent, while registrations of eights over $1000 increased 315 per cent

The name of Cyrus S. Eaton looms large in today's financial news. The Cleveland financier has acquired control of the United Light & Power Co. as result of surrender of part of holdings of Insull-Associated interests. United Light & Power has assets of more than $500,000,000, with gross earnings of $80,000,000 last year, and can Commonwealth Power owns about 10 per cent of United, and American Super-Power is also substantial holder.

Election of W. R. Burwell as a director of Devoe & Raynolds is seen as a step in eventual consolidation of interests in paint industry representing resources of $58,600,000. Burwell is an associate of Cyrus S. Eaton, president of Continental Shares, Inc., investment trust sponsored by Otis & Co. Eaton is a director of Otis & Co., as well as of Sherwin-Williams Paint Co. No official statement of a consolidation has been made.

Adjustment of world oil problems, forming such explosive mixture as to threaten open conflict between leaders of industry in United States and Europe, will be attempted at conferences to begin with arrival abroad of committees of American oil executives. Revision of export prices, elimination of friction between American and foreign oil interests and restriction of production are subjects to be discussed. One member of committee, W. C. Teagle, president of Texas Corp., is already on his way to Europe, and two others, James A. Moffett, vice-president of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, and George P. Whaley, president of Vacuum Oil Co., sail Sunday night on Atlantia.

J. Henry Schroder Banking Corp. as of June 29 showed total resources of $66,202,185, an increase of 15 per cent over a year ago. Acceptances outstanding are at a record level for this date at $28,824,305.

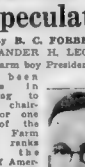
Legge, Ex-Farmer, Unusual; Speculation Warming Up

By B. C. FORBES



B. C. Forbes

ALEXANDER H. LEGGE, the ex-farm boy President Hoover has been fortunate in persuading to become chairman (for one term) of the Federal Farm Board, ranks among the first of America's corporation heads. He is an unusual type.

He has a horror of his time. He will talk, but not for quotation, by Boris on a farm and engaged in farm work until 24, he has retained his individuality. Certain popular phases of city life have no appeal whatsoever to him.

Since he entered the employ of the McCormick Reaper Company nearly 40 years ago, in a humble capacity, he has risen by way to the presidency of the International Harvester Company by the extraordinarily diligent exercise of innate ability. He had neither friends nor fortune to boost him. He rose by push, not by pull. Like most country boys, he early learned to look upon hard work as life's normal lot.

This is not the first time he has responded to an appeal to serve the country. He was vice-chairman of the war industries board during the war and managed the nitrate supply commission. His rare organization skill will now be brought into play on a colossal scale. Doubtless it was this phase of the task which appealed most to him. Incidentally, it says something for the character and the business principles of the head of the "Harvester Trust" that he received the endorsement of 150 farm organizations for his new job. Obviously, our farm population must have felt that he has given them a square deal. President Hoover, our farmers—and even the rest of us—are to be congratulated on this choice.

Thomas E. Wilson, the Chicago packer, returning this week from a four months' trip to South America, said to me:

"I am tremendously impressed by the progress both Argentine and Brazil are making agriculturally and industrially. They have advanced much more than is generally understood. Both are great countries, and they are headed for even faster progress. Such a development is unquestionably a great future. This country will do well to emphasize the closest possible relations with them as to build up neutral business relations."

Slow transportation between the United States and South America long has been a drawback, but better ships are now entering the service, and arrangements are being perfected for an excellent air line. Improved communication should do something to direct more South American travel to the United States; heretofore the first-class travelling facilities to Europe have drawn most of the business.

Stock market was the biggest fortunes are being made in utilities, especially companies involved in consolidations. Not a few utility shares have more than doubled in price since the early part of this year.

Stocks in which Sidney Mitchell, of Electric Bond & Share, etc., has been interested have been among the star performers For example, Mr. Mitchell's pet company, Electric Investors, has advanced from 77 to 217. This was virtually an investment trust organized by Mr. Mitchell before investment trusts came into vogue. Its holdings are mainly utilities, and, naturally, the management have been most astute on all that has been transpiring. Another issue, less well known, Securities Corporation General, has advanced more than $300 a share. Splitups of both stocks should shortly be in order.

The Stone & Webster offering, at par, has already, before actual distribution, shown a profit of some 20 points and the insiders declare the stock is worth substantially more. The usual monthly offering of 250 000 additional Insull Utilities investment shares less than two weeks ago quickly put about up 20 per cent in market value.

One word of caution: Don't figure on any significant Pacific Coast consolidation embracing, among others, California's two main companies, Pacific Gas & Electric and Southern California Edison. The principal insiders tell me that their attitude is thumbs down.

• • •

Distinctly greater public interest is being manifested in the stock market. The buying is more discriminatory than it was during the speculative fever earlier in the year.

The next important group to be taken in hand promises to be the rails. Most good railway stocks are still on a more attractive investment basis than the majority of industrials which have been specially boomed

Some day the good oil stocks will come into favor. Now they look the cheapest of all. But just when the real upward movement will set in, nobody can foretell.

• • •

My guess is that, after this month, money rates will become distinctly easier. Unless, of course, the country again goes speculation crazy

New Advantages Offered for Economic Independence

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, July 6—Independence Day, which symbolizes the birth of freedom as a nation, has come to be regarded as little more than an occasion for the suspension of business activities.

With the markets closed and individuals in position to take their minds off the day's work, it is fitting occasion for long headed persons to consider their own financial independence. Without a competence with which to meet the hazards of old age and incapacity, the liberty, which citizenship in this country confers, is an empty privilege. Originally, America set the pace for the whole world in political liberty. Now in the great post-war material development it is breaking new ground in assuring economic independence and liberty to the common people.

President Hoover has set the abolition of poverty as the new national goal. Never before have so many individuals participated in the great adventure of pooling savings and placing funds into giant industrial, utility and transportation enterprises. The populace of the public are sound, but the technique of investment has not yet been mastered by many. Speculative exploits have been substituted for prudent investment policies. In the phrase of Bernard M. Baruch, it would be desirable for the public to become investment minded again.

In order to keep his relative place in the community the working man, like the capitalist, should not only live within his means, but he should also allow in his budget for a surplus for investment. Unless this is done during the active years of maximum earning power the individual will be using up his principal and not getting added reserves.

Independence Day, couched in economic terms, should have a new meaning for enterprising, American eager to get on in the world.

Alexander Legge's decision to give up his position as head of the International Harvester Company, paying more than $100,000 a year, for a $12,000 government job as chairman of the new Federal Farm Board is typical of the new sense of public service which animates the current generation of business leaders. On the other hand, the readiness of the President to appoint a servant of big business to a public office reflects a changed political attitude toward business. Former President Wilson, in picking Paul M. Warburg, Wall Street banker, for a place on the Federal Reserve Board helped to shatter the old prejudice in Washington against big business During the war, when dollar-a-year men came to serve in Washington, the usefulness of business men in governmental posts was further recognized. President Harding carried along the New Deal idea further in inviting Mr. Andrew W. Mellon, one of the richest multi-millionaires in the world, to take the portfolio of Secretary of the Treasury.

Nowadays the best type of business leaders, such as Owen D. Young, Edward R. Stettinius and Bernard M. Baruch, not only recognize an obligation to serve in official and unofficial governmental capacities, but regard it as business itself an opportunity for social service.

In its competition with private business for the best minds government is still handicapped by political prejudice against paying large salaries. Thus it either must count on sacrifices by [illegible] men or on getting the services of inferior office holders. The underpaid office holders are frequently tempted to sell the graft which is denied them in salaries. When Republics become wiser they will recognize the economy of paying the market wage for superior talent.

Governmental changes in policy involve new business risks which are at present puzzling commercial leaders. A canvass of the opinion of representative business men throughout the country stresses the new uncertainties, which make it difficult for business men to anticipate correctly the result of pending events and the direction of trends now in formative stages Among these factors, which were discussed by the Council on the Trend of Business Reports in the Magazine of Business, are:

The cutting of wages will be imposed on imports through upward revision of the tariff; the effects of these revised rates on exports; the effect of political farm relief on the purchasing power of the farmer; the policy which will be followed by the Federal Reserve Board and the future trend of money rates; the trend in stock prices; the ability of the country's manufacturing plants to maintain a comparatively high rate of operation; the continuance of business men's confidence and consumption: the effect of the chain systems on independents and the effect on labor of mergers and the introduction of more efficient methods of machinery.

BOND TRADING IS LIGHT

New York, July 6 (AP)—A dull short session of the bond market today saw a slight recession in prices of the convertibles, some of which sold a point lower than in early trading. The volume of business was light, however, and there seemed to be no inclination to sell on the declines.

International Telephone 4½s and Atchison 4½s, both convertibles dropped a point, while fractional losses appeared in Allegheny Corporation 5s, American Telephone 4½s, Missouri Pacific 6½s and Southern Pacific 4½s, with war cents. The last-named issue showed the best resistance in the share privilege list.

Transactions in the standard rail utility and industrial bonds, as well as in the U. S. Government and the foreigns, was unusually dull and price changes were inconsequential.

Kroger Adds 88 to Its Chain Groceries

Kroger Grocery & Baking Co announces acquisition of chains which add 88 stores to the Kroger system. Acquisitions include 40 stores of the Thrift Stores with yearly sales volume of about $3,000,000; Thrift Stores operate in quarters and a warehouse at Herrin, Ill., operates 40 groceries and meat markets in 11 cities in Illinois. Kroger has also acquired 17 stores of Piggly-Wiggly-J wis Co. located in and around Oklahoma City; 18 stores of Franklin Piggly-Wiggly at Tulsa, Oklahoma; 12 stores of Piggly-Wiggly-Erwin Co located in and around Memphis, Tenn., and one Piggly-Wiggly store in Perry, Oklahoma. Thirty-six of the above acquisitions were taken over for cash.

STAGE AND SCREEN

TO BE SEEN, HEARD AND ADMIRED IN THE NEW ENTERTAINMENTS

A RUBBER CHECK, or at least that's what it looks like, bounces back upon Adolphe Menjou in "Fashions In Love" at the Metropolitan. Ruse Powell, probably a tailor, makes the presentation speech.

RUTH MIX, who takes after her father in some degree, offers at B. F. Keith's her "Rodeo Revue," a kicksome and musical version of what is supposed to be the general thing out where the West begins.

THE NEW SUN-BACK styles come in for some home treatment. Buster Keaton is the handy man and Dorothy Sebastian the anxious patron in "Spite Marriage," film comedy at Loew's State next week.

NO OBITS YET FOR DRAMA

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

NO season is really dead until the mourners troup homeward from the cemetery and pass pleasant comment on the appearance of the late departed. It is a good deal like that with the legitimate drama and its little sister musical comedy. With the passing of "Boom Boom" the future looked dark and dismal. The signs were ominous. If the energetic Shubert boys could not keep a single down town theater open, what chance could there be for even more speculative operators? For the Shuberts have the playhouses and dictate terms, even though their tenants may own the merchandise. The weather killed "Boom Boom." It was a good show wrecked by high temperature.

• • •

BUT the season is not totally dead. It may be a little wobbly, and perhaps a trifle overtanned from the July sun. But it still shows an unmistakable flicker of life and proposes to restore itself at the Colonial with Great Day, on July 15. This is a promising omen, for the Colonial has many times in the past borne us along upon interesting mid-summer excursions into musical comedy. "Great Day" is the new Vincent Youman production, chiefly notable because Mr. Youman is probably the youngest producer-composer now taking the operator's chance with a theater under the threat of hotter days.

Nicholas Young

• • •

IT is reported that Mr. Youman is only 30—a mere boy as they figure years in the play houses. Yet he has already created much more than his quota—his years considered—of the good things which have made the modern theater ring and prosperous. He is no idler; his fingers are ever on the itch for a piano upon which he may test new melodies. That his newest production, "Great Day" may possess a reasonable volume of merit, is apparent from the composer's previous ventures. Perhaps the best remembered of Mr. Youman's works is "No, No, Nanette," which kept the Tremont open for a full summer; also "Two Little Girls in Blue," "Wildfire," "Lollipop," "Hit the Deck" and "Oh, Please."

• • •

THIS is a formidable list of sound and profitable entertainment. Not at all bad, you might say, for a young man who started in life as a bank clerk, thought better of it, and then joined the United States Navy. If he didn't make the Marine band, Mr. Youman at least had friends with its band master and out of war time excitement his muses put in their best licks. In his new production Mr. Youman is meticulous in only one item. "Great Day" is not a musical comedy—it is a musical play. In the thoroughly initiated playgoer there is quite a difference. Mr. Youman appears to understand the underlying principle of the thing.

Suspicious?

FINE TALKIE FOR MENJOU

They say Adolphe Menjou scoffed at the talkies, would have nothing to do with them. But it's a veritable St. Paul conversion that appears in "Fashions In Love" now at the Metropolitan. Mr. Menjou certainly seems to relish his cinematic conversation. And the film itself, although not quite up to some of his previous things is nevertheless the most facile talkie that the Met has shown in many a raucous day.

Fay Compton

The debonair star, be it known, is called upon to play the piano in this one. Also to sing. He hits off this business quite well, but his music should be forgotten as quickly as possible. It is, frankly, poor stuff and Mr. Menjou appears to be more than faintly aware of it.

As for the rest, "Fashions In Love" bounds along in splendid fashion. There are some delicious comedy episodes which allow the star full play for his suave talents.

Two ladies from the European stage furnish admirable support. These are Fay Compton and Miriam Seegar, both far superior in the matter of diction to the majority of their sisters in Hollywood.

On stage at the Metropolitan there is "Miss United States" herself in the fleshings. She is Irene Ahlberg, a Physical Culture Magazine girl, and most pleasant to behold. The week's presentation is called "Pirates of Melody," in which Ted Claire and his band do the chief buccaneering. There are various short films and other features.

From College to Chorus
Her First Big Step

Miss Sebastian is a Southern girl. She was born at Birmingham, Ala. She attended the local schools and was a student also at the University of Alabama. Amateur theatricals at college left their mark upon her, so much so that she gave up her collegiate course and went to New York, with no knowledge of the difficulties which usually beset the aspirant to fame and fortune on the Broadway stage.

She trudged the streets for days and was known to every casting agent in town. Her first lucky break was had when she was cast as a model in a fashion show. After that she played in many musical comedies as a member of the chorus.

She tried the movies, but without success. Then she went to Hollywood and was given a part in "The Flying Fool." Her work in this picture was so good that she was given a contract by Pathe. Her first picture was "Hard Boiled Haggerty." Then she played in "Varsity" and "Skyscraper." Her next picture was "Spite Marriage."

SAIL AND DANCE

The Mayflower moonlight dine-and-dance sailings grow in popularity. The Mayflower Commodore's Orchestra is bigger and better than ever, and the "Crooning Trio," made up of three members of the orchestra, adds to the gaiety.

Increased dance floor space and increased dining booths are among the new items. Parking space is provided by the company at Rowes wharf after 7 p. m.

FRISCO FOOLS THE CRITICS

Pre-eminence on the stage is never achieved except after a long, hard grind. But the most difficult feat of all is the "comeback." Ask Joe Frisco, he knows. Frisco the stellar wit at the New B. F. Keith's this week, is one of the few performers who has scored a double success. Most people, faced with the handicaps which confronted Frisco on his second stab for fame, would have given up in despair.

Joe Frisco

Frisco felt the "skids" moving under his feet. His popularity was on the wane. Right then and there, before his popularity had completely died out, Frisco gave up the dance and became a comedian.

In this he realized that he would have to work under as severe a handicap as ever burdened the shoulders of an actor. Frisco studiers Nevertheless, he developed a sharp, contagious brand of humor and, strangely enough, his halting, uncertain speech made it all the funnier.

Sharing the new B. F. Keith program with Joe Frisco is Ruth Mix, talented daughter of Tom Mix. The young woman heads a company of 35 people in "Rodeo Revue." Also on the same bill are Bon Blue, assisted by Vera Brian, and the Personality Boys. For a closing number there is a special comedy carnival which includes Frisco, Miss Mix, Ben Blue and the Gamby-Hale Girls.

PLYMOUTH TRIPS

Probably in all New England no spot sounds its call more alluringly to the visitor to Boston than historic Plymouth. Thus, in addition to that great number of Bostonians who enjoy the Plymouth trips on Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company ships, there is now an army of transients making daily trips to this famous old Plymouth. There is a stopover at Plymouth of two and one-half hours.

"ENTIRE PEACE OUTLOOK HAS BEEN TRANSFORMED," says David Lloyd George, former Prime Minister of England, in a discussion of the limitation of armaments, published in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Snowbound

Film Actor Taught by The Great Mansfield

No less distinguished a stage mentor than Richard Mansfield headed the company in which Finch Smiles, English character actor is "Behind That Curtain," began his stage career. The film is showing at the Keith-Albee.

Smiles was a youngster of 21, a relative of the world-famous Mme. Tussaud, when he first appeared at the Lyceum Theater with Mansfield. He has a military record, having fought through the Boer War from 1899 to 1902 with the Royal Canadians, and in France during the World War with the South American Scottish. At the close of the conflict he entered pictures with the African Films Corp., as a character man. In this country he has appeared in "The Lost World," "The Big City," "White Cargo" and "The Vortex."

GRIFFITH TO WORK IN OIL

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

SEATTLE, July 5.—Hollywood will postpone its welcome home to David Wark Griffith for another week. D. W. is in Texas conferring with the oil men on the making of a Texas epic, to be financed by Texas capital. Oil in itself does not sound especially romantic, but the early days of Texas and the Alamo when it was under the Mexican domination is just full of romance and picture possibilities. Leave it to D. W. Griffith to discover this and to plan to bring it to the screen. I suppose some of the exteriors will be made in Texas, but the interiors will be filmed in Hollywood, despite Mr. Griffith's announcement that he would do all his picture making in New York in the future.

• • •

MADGE BELLAMY must have found her argument with the Fox company an expensive quarrel, for she has not made a picture since "Mother Knows Best," and that is well over a year ago. There has been no end of rumors that she was to make a picture, but only now it is officially announced that she is returning to the screen for Universal in Harry Pollard's next production, "Tonight at Twelve." This is a story by Owen Davis, and is said to have a good part for little Bellamy. Whether or not temperament had anything to do with her Fox dispute is a thing no columnist has a right to say, but if she did forget herself it has been a good lesson, and no doubt she won't make any more mistakes of refusing to work for a director.

THERE are cops and cops in this world, but none of them is any more effective on the screen than William Boyd. Boyd is going to glorify the New York police force in "Officer O'Brien." Tay Garnett is going to direct the picture which is an original story by Thomas Buckingham, a former director.

SNAPSHOTS collected at random by an observer:

Roland Drew and Dolores Del Rio dining at the Double Headed Russian Eagle. Lee Morrison ushering Lady Peel into Hollywood. Paul Whiteman feeding the press at Universal. Louise Fazenda back from Alaska starting another two-reel talking comedy for Christie. Helen Hayes getting a big hand from her Fox Fanny friends when she opened in "Coquette" at the Belasco in Los Angeles. Joe E. Brown driving a new car. Dorothy Revier confronted with the rumor that she is married, refusing to either admit or deny the report. That's all today.

Child Wonder of Films, Davey Lee, Is Picked by Al Jolson From Candidates

One of the most interesting figures on the screen today is Davey Lee, the four-year-old toddler, featured in the Vitaphone talking film, "Frozen River," now showing for the first time in Boston at the Scollay. It is in line with truth to say that this winsome youngster has talked his way into the hearts of motion picture fans all over the world, and earned, in a few months, a greater popularity than many of his elders have been able to obtain in a lifetime.

Davey Lee

Little Davey's success in "Sonny Boy" can hardly be measured, and the youngster is now gazing on a future that seems filled with gold. It is a noteworthy fact that in writing of Davey and his work in "Sonny Boy" none of the reviewers refer to him as a prodigy or precocious child.

Al Jolson's selection of Master Davey as the "Sonny Boy" of the "Singing Fool" meant a triumph for the lad over one hundred and eighty screen children who were being considered by the Warner Brothers casting office. And it was a personal triumph for Davey for he won out all by himself.

While Joe Marks, casting director, was interviewing the tot's mother, Davey wandered out on the lot, and was later discovered by his frantic mother riding pick-a-back on the shoulders of the star, Al Jolson. The two had already decided between themselves that Davey was to have the part.

After seeing a screen test of Davey Lee, Jack Warner, production manager, expressed belief that the child was ideal, having much charm that Jackie Coogan showed in earlier screen roles, together with utter lack of self-consciousness.

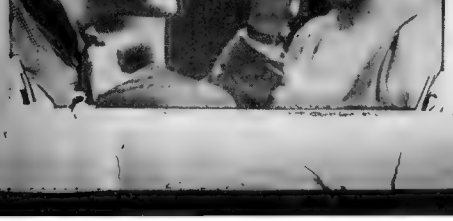
Pictures—Varities

GLOBE—"Alibi," with Chester Morris and Eleanor Griffith, and "Hey Rube" for four days; starting Thursday, "Thru Different Eyes," a movietone all-talker, and "The Steps Out."

BOWDOIN—"The Trial of Mary Dugan," "Honeymoon" and a Charlie Chase comedy, "Movie Night." Also vaudeville.

NORUMBEGA PARK—May Collier, billed as champion woman diver, in the free open-air circus in the theater, "While the City Sleeps" through Wednesday; starting Thursday, "The Official Scandal," Midway attractions.

AH! THIS MUST REQUIRE CHEEK



Even in Father Noah's day they succumbed to this sort of thing. In "Noah's Ark," at the Olympia and Fenway, Guinn Williams and Louise Fazenda find the same agreeable employment.

RIGHT ON HIS GUARD, BUT WHY?

Haines Adds Boxing to His Repertoire

William Haines, who has had to learn football, baseball, golf, polo and even military drill for his roles in pictures, now adds boxing to his athletic accomplishments in "A Man's Man," screen feature at Loew's State next week.

This newest Haines' picture isn't a prize fight story but a satirical romance of Hollywood in which Haines stages, with Sam Hardy, one of the most thrilling fist fights ever seen on the screen. In its wake bare knuckles, too, instead of the padded gloves of the prize ring

COLUMBIA HAS NEW FEATURE

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

COLUMBIA brings to the weekly program schedule a new half-hour of operatic selections next Monday night at 8 o'clock. The first program will be devoted to numbers from works of Mozart, Verdi, Wolf-Ferrari and Wagner.

DUNNINGER, vaudeville psychic and illusionist, will commence a series of weekly "Ghost Hours" on WJZ Thursday night at 8.30. In his first program he will attempt to transmit thought by mental radio-telepathy to his audience.

JUST IN CASE you're wondering what has become of Goldie and Dusty, Dusty, a blonde, and those two lads, by name Harvey Hindermyer and Earle Tuckerman, are now masquerading as Gus and Tony for the Oxiton Company of Boston. They are touring various stations, spending a week or more in each, and in the fall will go on a chain which will include most of the stations they have visited. Lately they have been at WHK, WEAR, WGR, WKBM and WMAK.

Tchaikowsky's 1812 Overture will be played tonight by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Esplanade concert, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct. Fiedler is also scheduled to conduct the concert tomorrow night.

SCREEN CAREER FOR IDEAL GIRL

Fame and fortune on the silver screen may await Miss Isabel Sanches, pretty 19-year-old Cambridge music teacher, chosen by Roy D'Arcy, the famous screen villain who played a week's engagement at the New B. F. Keith's Theater as his ideal Boston girl.

Miss Sanches was among the thousands of girls who read of D'Arcy's offer to pick one girl for possible success in the Boston Evening American.

At each performance throughout the week, D'Arcy, "the man you love to hate," greeted girls in the audience, who thought they were he. He said he would pick one girl for a star with him when he makes a series of films in the fall. Miss Sanches was his choice

"I am thrilled over the honor bestowed on me," Miss Sanches said, when D'Arcy announced his choice and handed the winner a silver vanity case as a memento of her victory. "I had no idea I would be chosen. It gave me a thrill just to meet Mr. D'Arcy, but to win—that is wonderful."

Miss Sanches' ambition as the ideal Boston girl because of her charm and sweet personality, D'Arcy said after the contest, "She has natural girlish charm that is piquant. She is retiring to the point of shyness, which in these days is charming in any young woman."

"I'm very fond of music and Miss Sanches informs me she graduated from the Boston Conservatory of Music, a teacher of the piano. 'I have invited her to Hollywood in the fall for screen tests and believe a career in the movies may be ahead of her. I certainly wouldn't mind playing the part of the villain if she were the object of my attentions"

Swimming Meet Planned for Revere

There are plenty of thrills in the rides, shows and other entertaining features at Revere Beach, but the Chamber of Commerce is seeking an additional free attraction to present during the month of July.

As plans stand at present, there will be a swimming meeting at the new Municipal Swimming Pool Wednesday evening, July 10, at which some of the stars of the acquatic world will appear in swimming and diving events.

Speed boat races are scheduled for Sunday and Sunday beginning July 20 and plans are under consideration for conducting a Spanish fiesta during the entire week in the month of August

This Day in Our History

GENERAL JOHN BURGOYNE captured Fort Ticonderoga for England on July 6, 1777. The Americans, who were in possession of the fort at the time, were forced to evacuate the day before because Burgoyne's force was largely superior. They retreated in good order and joined main army.

"IT TAKES A MAN" by Elizabeth McFadden

Six-Day Story of Millions and Triumphant Love

VERT advanced into the circle of light shed by the lamp at the piano. He was in a triumphant mood. Evidently events were moving to his satisfaction.

"Why the funeral gloom, dear lady?"

"I prefer it."

"Did you fix things with the Old Bird?"

"I did. You move in tomorrow. What else do you want?"

"That woman detective to act as my maid. That one you said you could get. The oldish woman. I must have her for a chaperon. And she can keep an eye on Mary West—and tattle to her about what I'm doing to her husband."

"He's ready to eat out of my hand. He fell for my psychic stunt, Rosamond. The one I worked on Mynas? And others? Umhum! 'Feeling' him call me! When we have been alone he will call me back. They always do. It tickles their vanity."

"Look here, Carlotta," said Vert, "when we get our share of the loot, here, I want just one thing, and that's to marry you. I don't mind your flirting with Diccon West—since that's a part of the game—but you're in this deal with me—remember that!"

She smiled. "When I am Mrs Diccon West," she said to herself, "you can blackmail me all you like, till then—bah!" She leaned toward him, her lovely face a study of innocence and sincerity. "Cyrille, you know I am with you, heart and soul."

"Good!" He smiled back. "I trust you," he said aloud, and added mentally, "as far as I can see you."

There was a moment's pause. His mind reverted to the problems of their scheme.

"They wouldn't admit it to me, if it were. You know I very much doubt if it is my baby. I don't think my dying wife would lie. I could have lived. I'm not at all convinced that you didn't poison her on the chair and let it go down with the flood."

"Go look at it," suggested Vert.

"Where are Ma and Pa?" she asked.

Vert strolled over to the door leading to the library and listened. Then he came back. He gestured toward the next room and made one word with his lips.

"Talking."

"Did you want something, Madam?" he asked.

"I think you had better ask Mrs. West."

"Perhaps I had."

"Mary, I don't know what got into me back there. She asked me to kiss her, as a token of friendship, and I didn't like to offend her."

"I thought maybe you were angry with me?"

"I didn't like the idea of that woman for ten days without learning to know her type," she answered.

There was a momentary pause. His mind reverted to the problems of their scheme.

"They wouldn't admit it to me, if it were. You know I very much doubt if it is my baby. I don't think my dying wife would lie. I could have lived. I'm not at all convinced that you didn't poison her on the chair and let it go down with the flood."

Diccon drew her close.

"I thought maybe you were angry with me?"

Mary's answer was a caress.

"I didn't like the idea of that woman for ten days without learning to know her type," she answered.

There was a momentary pause. His mind reverted to the problems of their scheme.

"I only want to keep friends with her for Betty's sake," Diccon explained. "Mother loved her, decently. Said all she wanted was to take her baby and go away where Vert couldn't find her. She's afraid of him."

"She used to be afraid of her husband. Now it's Vert. A bid for sympathy."

"She made me feel sorry for her, Mary. I thought if we could separate Vert and Carlotta, deal with them differently and then persuade her to stay, she'd leave us the baby. Don't you see?"

"I don't believe that's what she means to do," answered Mary. "I think she's after something quite different."

"What?"

"Yes. The jury. What chance will you have with the jury when I stand with my child in my arms and tell them the story of that night you left me?"

"You—you wouldn't dare—take it before a court!"

"Oh, wouldn't I? Stealing a child is punishable by law. People get sent to states prison for that. Abduction, they call it. The driver tones deepened and hardened—"you came here with it and based your claim to the best fortune on the lie that the child was your own. A few more years in prison for that."

"Carlotta! What do you want? Why must we quarrel over this thing?"

"Ah, now you're getting sensible."

"Tell me what you want!"

"I want to stay here."

"What will you take to go?"

"What have you got to give?"

Mary thought of the three thousand dollars laid up in the bank, of Diccon's present salary, of the increasing bonus—

"I could give you enough to let you live—simply—if we could save now Diccon is working."

Carlotta laughed.

"Imagine me—living simply." She stretched her luxurious body and glanced down at the wealth it represented, the gowns, the jewels, the exquisite care and grooming. Then she surveyed the room around her.

"What do you want?"

"Everything?"

"I want money, yes! But not as you think. To be paid off like a servant. Set adrift! Oh, no! I want my money. Everything!"

"You mean—the capital? The West money?"

"But that belongs to the baby!"

"Right!—And goes with the baby! I'll take care of it for her. I want the baby, too!"

* * *

Diccon had stood for a moment in the hall listening to the voices of Mary and Carlotta till they were silenced by the door that closed behind them. Then he went back to the drawing-room where a little wood-fire burned in the open grate. He had a sense of relief.

He fell to pacing back and forth then he went to the door of the music-room, swung it open, and looked in.

"When you get done expressing your soul," he said, "come into the drawing-room and have a cigarette."

"Thanks, I will," cried Vert, leaving the piano with alacrity. "I was just killing time, I didn't know where you all were."

Diccon led the way back to the fire. His mind was busy on the probable amount of cash necessary to buy Vert off this fellow.

As Diccon seated himself on the opposite side of the hearth he eyed Vert with interest. The "Cursed One" had changed in the last two years, grown stouter. He looked flabby, less well-groomed.

"I'm going to settle down for a long stay here," Vert was saying lazily. "A long stay?" echoed Diccon. "How long?"

"It depends somewhat on—other people," he confided, "on Miss Cattell, for one. Personally, I'd like to get to California for the winter. All I want is a snug villa in some millionaire's row. Carlotta as chatelaine—plenty of ready cash from some regular source to meet my expenses. Give me that combination and I'd be as peaceful as an old horse. Women could drive me, then, and I'd thank my feet."

Diccon's gaze hardened. Did he mean that as a reference to the baby?

Vert saw the change of Diccon's expression and interpreted it correctly. There was a point he could yield. He continued:

"Not that I care to have babies crawling under my feet. I'm not a family man. My paradise would be just a complete more so in fact—without any little fairy in it. Of course, Carlotta might have ideas in that subject—I think," he concluded with bland significance, "she would be glad of a chance to get it said, "Carlotta and I are going to be married."

"Really?" said Diccon.

Vert lifted his eyebrows. "My dear boy," he protested, "I wasn't dreaming of asking you for any help."

"That income from the five million willed to the baby."

"Oh, that's in safe hands for re-investment, I believe. He never speaks of it to me."

Diccon sat silent.

"Besides," continued Vert, "it is highly un-American to go on building a colossal fortune generation after generation. The Old Bugger—I refer to the gentleman who dined with us—the Old Bug probably spends some five thousand out of an income of —shall we say— fifty times that. The rest is just balling up. balling up for what—Little Bright-Eyes in her crib? Rah!"

Diccon found himself on his feet, a white-hot murderous anger seeing through his veins and muscles. His arm rose for the smashing blow to school to let fall on that face—but Vert had leaped from his chair in time, ducked, scrambled, shoved the chair between them, and stood behind it—white, startled.

"Get out of here," breathed Diccon.

He pointed toward the door and Vert, who preferred to argue with men not temporarily insane with rage, turned and walked warily out into the hall. He sighed with relief when he found himself in the company of Stevens.

A week! Diccon and Mary went about their usual ways. A week of endless slow torture. The day following the visit of Vert and Carlotta, they had telephoned to Lander that their plans were changed and they would not want the house. Lander had called up Diccon and told him, amused at their inconsequence. Then—silence.

Never had the baby seemed so dear to Diccon. Her sweet ways, her dependence on them, the gay humor of her pranks, the promises of her sturdy little person, made her increasingly beloved.

They would guard her. With every atom of his strength. He loosed Thor, the police dog and brought him to the house. From that day on, Thor slept across the threshold of the nursery.

A week passed . . . then . . .

Monday night came again. Diccon went beserk by the stairs in search of Mary. He found her in the nursery, Betty on her way to bed, on mother's knee. Mary's face was charged with excitement, but his manner was controlled.

"Where's Hilda?"

"Take the baby to her. Come to our room. I want to talk to you, and brace yourself for bad news. They've come back."

"At the station, with Landor! I was passing in the spring wagon with the feed—as the evening express came through—I don't think they saw me. And I got a letter at the post office on the way up from the detective. Vert and Carlotta got married last week after they left here. We can't separate their attacks now. They'll be together against us!"

"They're coming here, now!" Mary put her hand to her eyes. She stood a moment, swaying as though half-fainting.

Diccon was staring at two men evidently waiting. For a moment she thought they were Vert and Landor. Then they moved out of the shadow and a light fell on their faces.

"Can you make out who they are?" asked Diccon.

"One of them is that Ed. Walling who came to see you that time the baby was sick."

"I thought so! They're from Yeaman's office." His face quivered as though he had been dealt a blow.

"What for?—Diccon!"

"It looks as though they haven't evidence enough to just—get out a warrant against us—but, want them here if—they can get the evidence. You have to give Yeaman real proof before he can make an arrest."

"What—shall we say?" she whispered. "What shall we do?"

"Fight!" cried Diccon with savage force. "Fight it out to the finish. It isn't just a question of you and me now. It isn't a question of right or wrong. Not now! I'll settle all that with Landor later. It's the baby! Our keeping her."

"What shall we say?"

"Say we've had Landor first. She's ours. Our own flesh and blood. Diccon Lander's daughter's story. To laugh at! Listen, Mary! Keep your mind on the baby. Think of her—that's all you've to do. How helpless—are we handing her over to them—to be slung around like a bundle of rags—are you know she would?—Our Betty!"

The car stopped at the front door. The bell rang. They could hear Stevens in the hall below.

"I'm all right," said Mary. Her voice was full, quiet. "Let's go down. I can do it, now."

Together they descended the stairs.

As the motor that brought Vert and the others from the station passed the lodge gate, two of Westlands, a man who had evidently been stealing a ride slipped off the back of the car and crept away in the dusk into the screen of shrubbery. A little grey wiry man he was, with something furtive in his every movement. Softly he worked his way near the house, pausing occasionally to listen. No footsteps. No barking of dogs. Heartened by the profound silence, he crept nearer.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Diccon West, son of a multi-millionaire, marries a girl in his father's office. The latter gives him $5000 and turns him out. Diccon loses his money and has to go to work as a laborer. He meets a smooth adventurer named Cyrille Vert. Some time later Vert hears of the elder West's death and learns Diccon is the son. He hunts him and Mary up in their shabby quarters on the river front in Cincinnati, reads the will and suggests they palm a child off as their own in order to inherit the estate. Otherwise they will get nothing. Mary has taken in a young wife who reminds Diccon of a girl he once knew. She gives birth to a sickly child. Mary takes care of her; a flood comes and the girl appears cold and dead. They flee, taking the baby with them. They tell Stephen Landor, the trustee, that the child is theirs and he accepts the statement. They go to Westlands, the West country estate to live, but Landor makes it clear that no money will be paid them and that they are really living on the bounty of the child. Vert turns up and having saved the child's mother, deduces the baby's parentage. He threatens Diccon with exposure and says he'll bring the baby's mother to prove his case. Diccon goes to work on the farm as a farmhand determined to succeed. Meanwhile Vert after a long search runs across the girl whom Mary had befriended. Diccon grows to love the baby and shudders at the thought of Vert's possible appearance. The latter keeps his word and comes with the baby's mother, whom Diccon recognizes as Carlotta Catell, a girl he had known in Cambridge, ostensibly to rent a cottage on the estate but really to blackmail the two. Carlotta tries her charms on Diccon.

FOREST LOVE by Hazel Livingston

What Has Gone Before

Nancy Hollenbeck, though young and beautiful, is poor. Her mother of a socially accepted family, married a poor man. She warns Nancy against the same "mistake." Nancy, becoming cynical, gives up handsome Mat Tully and begins an affair with Jack Beamon, married to wealth. He plans to divorce his wife and marry Nancy. On a trip to Yellowpoint, Nancy meets Roger Decatur, a ranger, who falls in love with her. Nancy tells him she will only marry for wealth. She prepares to leave the mountain camp and rejoin her Aunt Edith and sister Louise at summer valley hotel. On a hike with Roger he declares his love and Nancy admits her love for him.

CHAPTER 14

THE car was all ready, plenty of oil and gas, tires tested, luggage neatly packed. Essie and Gladys were sitting in the back seat, manikin style, hats straight on their heads, feet firmly planted, waiting. Mrs. Porter was also waiting.

For the second time in ten minutes, Mr. Porter lifted the hood and looked at the engine. He seemed loath to start. "Well, I guess it's all right. We can go now," he said.

"All right! Of course it's all right!" his wife snapped. She glared at the suspicious air in her china blue eyes. "I told you that before you looked. Why shouldn't it be all right, a fine engine like that? And if you're holding up our whole trip for that Nancy Hollenbeck you got a long wait, Herman, and the girls and I will go inside again. You needn't think she'll come say good-by to me. Not that one. We ain't society enough for her. But a long wait, Herman."

"Ranger, mama, "Gladys corrected.

"Anyhow, a common ranger is good enough. Such ideas. I was opposed from the first. Why can't you girls be company for each other? Always wanting others, and what for? Whenever it's strangers it's just the same. Both the neighbor kids break that pink tea set Uncle Ben brought from New York last winter? Real genuine Haviland china. It was, and that bottle of German cologne the same way. Smashed, first thing—"

"Mama, dear, that was years ago—"

"Always, the same. Always getting imposed on, this family. I hope this teaches you a lesson. When I see Mrs. Watson again I'll have something to say—"

"Mama, please—"

"Mama, you don't care how you hurt us!" Elsie was close to tears.

"I don't care, it is a shame the way that girl treated you. Like dirt. I am going to speak my mind to Mrs. Watson. Yes, I am. I mean it. My conscience wouldn't let me do any different. If it was one of my girls I'd expect her to do it by me!" Mrs. Porter's fervory toque wobbled on the back of her head, two bright spots burned in her cheeks.

"So, so," Mr. Porter murmured, with a lazy, lingering look toward the canvas cabins from which he had been momentarily expecting Nancy to emerge. But she was not in sight, so he stepped on the starter, and blew a long, melodious farewell on the horn, effectively drowning out further conversation.

* * *

"Love at first sight," Roger was murmuring, and the way his voice broke on the words made Nancy's eyes brim afresh, and the pounding start again in her heart. "I thought it was a joke—I didn't know it ever happened, but my dear it does—it does—"

She lifted her head from his shoulder, and began to rub a dingy powder-puff rather futilely over her pink nose. "I know—it's terrible. But we'll get over it."

"Get over it?" he echoed, laughing, but she did not laugh. She was crying again, helplessly. His two hands gripped her shoulders, roughly. "Look here, girl, what are you saying? Who's going to get over it?"

"B-both of us," said Nancy, and laid her wet face against his coat sleeve again.

"Are you crazy? Of course we won't get over it. Why—I love you. You said you loved me—"

"I do—I do. I'm just m-mad about you, but I've got to go right back to the Awahnee Hotel, and I'm going to go on being engaged to—to Louise and—and Louise some day we'll both laugh about this and—"

"Laugh! God!"

"After we have got over it, I mean—"

"Nancy Hollenbeck, you ARE crazy!"

"No, I'm not. But I would be if I didn't go on with my engagement. I mean I have to—I promised—"

"Rot! You can't give up a man you love for one you don't!"

"Yes, I can. I already did. I was awfully mad when you—but I put him right out of my mind—or almost—"

She had her head back on his arm again, pressing her cheek tight against the rough cloth, so that half her words were lost, and he had to guess at them. "Roger, dearest, it would be the most awful thing in the world for you if I did marry you. I'd be an awful wife for a poor man. It would be the worst tragedy—"

"Well, that's too bad. Mrs. Decatur. Hate to have you start out your married life feeling that way. But don't you worry, I'll get on with our trip right pronto—"

He grinned as he looked at his watch. "Five minutes past twelve, honey. Don't you mind going to get on with our trip right pronto—"

"GONE? Why . . . it can't be gone . . . my fare was paid on it. . . . You know what to do!" She beat her hands together, helplessly. "Roger, you should have told me. This—this shouldn't have happened—"

"Now you've got to come with me!" His blue eyes were dancing. One long arm shot out, and pulled her to him.

"He's me! Help me!" Oh if she only knew a prayer . . . "Dear God, please keep me from loving Roger—" But she couldn't keep her mind on it, with him kissing her eyes, and his arms about her . . . tighter . . . tighter. . . .

"Roger, I can't . . . how can I? What would people think?"

"Nothing. We'll be married, won't we?"

"You don't marry anybody you haven't known a week!"

"You're going to—"

"I can't . . . I wouldn't dare . . . the family—"

"Damn the family. T'hell with the family. We'll call on them one of these days, and fix that up all right. Come on, sweetheart, we've got to get our things and be on our way."

She let him carry her up the rocky trail to the road. He did it so easily, as if she were a child. Your bus is coming, honey. Hungry?"

"Yes, I am. I already did. I was awfully hungry, but I put him right out of my mind—or almost—"

"Now you've got to come with me!" His blue eyes were dancing. One long arm shot out, and pulled her to him.

"He's me! Help me!" Oh if she only knew a prayer . . . "Dear God, please keep me from loving

Holding 'Waikiki' Picnic in Our Own Home

WE can't all go to Rome to do as the Romans do, so unfortunately, with a bit of imagination and the spirit of play, we can stay right at home and still have all of the fun of doing as the Romans do, or of pretending that we are in the South Sea Isles or anywhere else that we should very much like to be.

That is the spirit in which this Waikiki Beach Party was planned. The weather was tropical. The water a deep blue, and the beach seemed unusually inviting and the big one Saturday afternoon. So two friends hastened to their telephones and called a number of other friends. "Bring your ukuleles, and come in your bathing suits. We are having a Waikiki Beach Party at 5 o'clock. We'll provide the supper."

The remainder of the afternoon the two hostesses spent in preparing the supper. And this is what they decided upon as a most appropriate and inexpensive Waikiki Beach Party menu:

Waikiki Sandwiches
Aloha Sandwiches
Honolulu Salad
Pacific Punch Hawaiina Panoche

WAIKIKI SANDWICHES

These are truly Hawaiian, for they combine the use of tuna fish caught in Hawaiian waters with Hawaii's national fruit, the pineapple. To make the filling for these sandwiches, flake a can of tuna fish, add 2 tbsps. chopped sweet pickles, a little salt and pepper and enough French dressing to moisten well. Drain ¾ c. of crushed Hawaiian pineapple, add to the mixture and mix well. Spread thickly on buttered whole wheat bread.

HONOLULU SALAD

Cut 2 c. of cold, cooked lamb or chicken into fine pieces. (A' sign of boneless chicken comes in handy for this.) Add ½ c. diced celery and 1 c. of drained, crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Season with salt, mix with mayonnaise and serve at the picnic in paper cups with crackers or the cream cheese sandwiches.

ALOHA SANDWICHES

Mix cream cheese with a little cream and thin with it ½ c. finely chopped nuts, ½ c. celery, diced, and 2 c. of crushed pineapple. Season well. Season with salt and paprika and with enough mayonnaise to make the mixture spread easily. Cut rounds of thin white bread with a biscuit cutter and spread the filling between two rounds of the bread.

PACIFIC PUNCH

Boil 2 c. of sugar and 1 c. of water for 10 minutes. Cool and add 1 c. of tea infusion, 2 c. of juice from canned cherries, the juice of 3 lemons and 3 oranges, and the syrup from 2 large cans of Hawaiian pineapple. Dilute with enough cold water to make it the desired strength. (About 1 qt.) Chill and take to picnic in thermos bottles.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

"Emily, is there anything you want in town this morning?"

"Yes; you might buy a jar of that truffle jam I've been reading about."

MONDAY
is the
ANNUAL SUMMER OUTING
MARTHA LEE COOKING SCHOOL and WOMEN'S CLUB

We will leave Rowe's Wharf on the 10:15 boat. There will be bathing on the beach in front of the bandstand, followed by the all-important basket luncheon ceremonies (or luncheon at your favorite Nantasket restaurant). Monday is Dollar Day at Nantasket, with the opportunity to enjoy all the attractions of Paragon Park for a dollar. This will be followed by a shore dinner in the Palm Garden or wherever the various groups may elect to satisfy their sea breeze whetted appetites, concluding with the trip home on the last boat at 10:45 P. M.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

Schoolmaster—Now, Willie, if the earth's axis is an imaginary one, can you hang clothes on it?

Willie—Yes, sir.

Willie—Imaginary clothes.

Month's Trial Helped Her

"I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was 14 years old to build me up. I had been frail and nervous. After taking three bottles I was in normal condition. Since then I occasionally have a run-down feeling which makes me weak, nervous and irritable. By taking two or three bottles of the Compound I am back to normal."—Mrs. Jerry C. Jarvis, R. F. D. GAY COTTON PRINTS SPELL SUMMER CHIC

The warm days remind one of a beautiful garden. Everywhere it is fashionable circles, smart women are appearing in most attractive colorful print and pastel cotton frocks. No wonder! They are so entirely flattering to sun-tan complexions.

The Style No. 8108 I'm offering today is simply exquisite—sleeves, of course, if it's within the reach of the most modest budget, and even the amateur at sewing.

It is made of filmy cotton voile in cool green tones. It is decidedly French, the type the exclusive shops are showing for the summer time wear.

It comes in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. In the medium size, 3¼ yards of 36-inch material is sufficient to make it.

White rajah silk is very well liked and makes up lovely in this design. Other charming ideas are shantung in peach shade, brown and white gingham check, Lake blue, white or natural color voile, silk green sports weight linen, red and white print in tub silk, and yellow and green in large floral chiffon print.

Pattern price 15 cents in stamps or coin (wrapped carefully). Enclose 15 cents additional, if you wish a copy of our latest book of Fifth Avenue Fashions. All our styles are created in Paris or New York. Every pattern contains full directions. No experience necessary. Very easy to use and guaranteed to fit perfectly.

Address all orders to Boston American Fashion Dept., 551 Fifth Ave, New York City.

JEWISH LEADER SEES GOOD WILL MENACED

Last week's Jewish Advocate printed a long correspondence between the Rev. William Anthony, originator of the Federal Council's Good Will Committee between Jews and Christians, and Mr. Lewis Marshall, who suggests good-will may be endangered if Christians persist in trying to convert Jews to Christianity.

Among other things Mr. Marshall wrote: "Let the Jews become better Jews and Christians better Christians, and this will be a happier world. Then genuine good-will may be ushered into existence automatically. How can there be good-will with reservations? If you have your way, good-will toward the Jews would be a mere catchword, a beautiful figure of speech for there would be no Jews left.

To these and many other arguments the Rev. Mr. Anthony responds: "Are we promoting real religious liberty and real freedom of speech, if we agree, either tacitly or to keep to ourselves that which we regard as most important of all? Is it not the American spirit to speak out, to express convictions plainly, and then having expressed them to allow every man to heed or reject them? Is it really in harmony with the American spirit to put a muzzle upon any part of our people and say they shall not talk religious views or seek to propagate their views among certain groups of our people? Is not the freedom of discussion the sound principle to fix up to?"

Both men speak sincerely and fearlessly, and it is hoped by the Federal Council that nothing will happen to bar increased good-will between Jews and Christians.

Large Crowds on Boston Common

Last Sunday the Catholic Truth Guild reported an audience estimated at a thousand or more to listen to a talk on patriotism by the secretary. He stated that Catholics are taught by their church to love and defend their country as an interest second only to public worship of Almighty God.

The Greater Boston Federation of Churches having a stand close by the Catholic location begins its services at 2:30 and David Goldstein at 4. Unusual interest is centering about both meetings.

CHURCH SERVICE DIRECTORY

BAPTIST

THE SINGING CHURCH

DUDLEY ST. BAPTIST (Singing Church), Dudley St., Station in other prominent places. With the text went a short prayer.

With his increased duties as head of the New England Lord's Day League, Dr. Watson feels that he must give up this work and other interests that have appealed to him.

He will not, however, relinquish his leadership of the National Reform Association with headquarters in Washington, D. C. Yesterday he left for Baltimore and Washington, where he will spend most of the summer preaching and attending to various nation-wide activities. He will also visit Cincinnati and cities in the State of Vermont.

Dr. P. H. Clifford of Newark Accepts Call

The Rev. Philip H. Clifford, S. T. D., of the Presbyterian Church, Newark, N. J., has accepted a call to come to the First Presbyterian Church, Boston, as successor to Dr. Robert Watson, who recently resigned to become executive secretary of the New England Lord's Day League.

Dr. Clifford's acceptance arrived yesterday, and the new minister will assume his duties in the early fall.

Death Penalty May Be Killed Soon

With a doubled budget, with supporters on the judiciary committee, with an increasing interest in the Massachusetts State Senate, the Committee on Abolition of the Death Penalty looks hopefully to next year. Those interested in the movement against gallows and electric chair will employ a field worker next year, and will place many capable speakers throughout the Commonwealth.

Of the situation, Prof. Zechariah Chaffee, Jr., of Harvard, chairman of the committee, writes: "We have enlisted the interest of large numbers of people in all parts of the state, local committees have been organized in many towns and cities. Our executive committee has unanimously voted to double our budget.

N. E. Baptists Focus at Ocean Park, Me.

A boys' camp will open at Ocean Park, Me., next Monday, and youngsters from many New England parishes will depart for the wonderful rocks, ocean and hills of America's finest, rugged coast line. A camp of girls will follow, and in August there will be many gatherings of adults for the discussion of many religious problems. The Rev. Otis W. Foye of the Dorchester Temple has charge of the camp.

Summer Programs May Be Prophetic

Protestant churches of Boston and suburbs report 18 and more union meetings during the summer months of July and August. A spirit of get-together is being shown that some think will soon demonstrate the feasibility of effective forms of union during the entire year.

A Dream Comes True

In the place of a poor decaying old wooden clubhouse on Tileston st., North End., there is now rising a new fireproof five-story palatial $100,000 settlement house of the most approved style. Fr. George P. O'Connor of the Catholic Charitable Bureau has long hoped for such a building in which all club activities could be carried on, and now his dream is coming true. The building will contain an auditorium, offices, shops, a laundry room, club rooms and living quarters for those in charge. It will be dedicated in the late fall. Children in the neighborhood already are growing impatient and urge the workmen on to finish it up. Mr. Edward A. Hubbard of 11 Beacon st. has generously donated the plans, and is taking great interest in seeing that all details are according to specifications.

BIBLE TEXTS DRAWN FROM ENTIRE BOOK

More than 1500 Bible texts have been selected by Dr. Robert Watson during the last five years and sent to thousands of newspapers for publication. Twenty thousand dailies and many weeklies and some magazines have carried these texts carefully selected. Dr. Watson says he began four years ago with Genesis and picked out every text that would be appropriate. This last week he chose his final one taken from the last chapter of the Book of Revelations, 17th verse:

"And the spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst, come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

A New School

Professor Vida D. Scudder of Wellesley College announced Wednesday evening at the conference for church work carried on under the auspices of the Episcopal Church that next year plans now maturing would result in a school for Christian ethics. This will undertake to discuss and investigate commercial, social, educational activity. Standards of behavior and functions of the church will come in for prominent places in the various courses. The school will meet at Wellesley College as the conference has done since its start.

CHARITABLE HUB WOMEN TO CONVENE

A special train will leave tomorrow morning from the South station, 9 o'clock, with delegates from the Ladies Catholic Benevolent Association to attend the fourth quadrennial and 18th convention, meeting at Atlantic City this coming week. There will be about 125 in the company and more will be picked up at Providence, where the Worcester, New Bedford and Fall River delegates will join the party. Others will be taken on at New Haven.

There will be in all about 1000 delegates, who will assemble Tuesday morning and march to St. Nicholas church, where solemn high mass will be celebrated.

Supreme Deputy Mrs. Alice C. Maloney, who will be up for reelection, will have charge of all arrangements for the New England delegation. The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Spains will attend the convention from Boston. On Thursday evening Supreme President Miss Kate Mahoney will receive at Haddon Hall.

Endeavorers in Kansas City

Representatives of ten million young people who belong to the International Society of Christian Endeavor are now gathered in Kansas City, Mo., for their 32d convention. President Daniel A. Poling, LL.D., of New York in his opening address giving a report of work done and plans ahead emphasized the part youth has to play in backing the government in law enforcement, and in furthering plans for international peace and disarmament. The Rev. Mr. Poling said:

"During our lenten period more than 10,000 Easter sunrise services were conducted by young people under 'Endeavor' auspices. . . . I do particularly call your attention to the fact that we have a responsibility for law enforcement all our own. We dare not lightly regard the implications of our slogan of 18 years ago, 'A saloonless nation by 1930.' By our private practice and public testimony we must challenge lawlessness. We must throw our whole influence behind the government and in support of the constitution and law.

"With such world peace can never be an empty phrase. Our field is the world. We shall never forget the horror of war. United Christian Endeavorers face to face upon the field of battle in bloody throes of war. Tonight our vow to have a part in ending war comprehends at once the passion of personal Christian testimony."

Woman Missionary Off on World Tour

Miss Carolyn Smiley, daughter of Mrs. Jane M. Smiley of Winchester, sailed last week from Hoboken for a tour around the world in a visit to many missionary stations under the direction of the American Board of Foreign Missions. She has been in the foreign field teaching and observing, and now goes on a cruise of inspection well equipped for a critical observation. She will spend time in Japan, Turkey, Africa, India, Ceylon, the Philippines, China and Korea. Miss Smiley is an associate secretary of the American Board at 14 Beacon st.

Presbyterian Ranks Jump to 50,000,000

The Rev. John A. McClelland in his sermon tomorrow morning in the Fourth Presbyterian Church, South Boston, will draw lessons from the recent Pan-Presbyterian Alliance Conference held in the First Presbyterian Church. He will show how the many branches and divisions of the denomination are gradually drawing together. The North and South Presbyterians, the Covenanters, the United and the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., are all looking toward co-operation and final unity. "Our numbers throughout the world," said the Rev. Mr. McClelland, "have now reached a membership of fifty millions. During August this clergyman will be away and his place taken by the Rev. John A. Gregg, student pastor.

A Week of Religious Education at Shoals

Unitarians will assemble once more at the Isle of Shoals off Portsmouth, N. H., on the 15 is the date set for the opening of the summer courses with a program by the department of religious education of the American Unitarian Association co-operating with the Laymen's League. Among speakers who will address the ninth annual church school institute will be Professor Ambrose W. Vernon of Dartmouth, Professor Kirsopp Lake of Harvard and Professor Henry N. Wieman of the divinity school of the University of Chicago.

FINE POINTS of MODERN HOMES

By BETTY BONNELL

I HAVE just been thinking that the sentiment connected with the term "Home," might well be the result of the romantic origin and development of everything entering into its design and construction. No matter what phase of building I choose to write about, I find that its history goes back to antiquity and that its use began with conditions as remote and strange as present-day life would probably be on another planet.

Betty Bonnell

Take windows, for instance: how many centuries elapsed between the time man learned to control a crude shelter and the day when he contented this idea that a hole punctured in one of the walls would serve to emit light, air and, finally, add to the comfort of the primitive cabin?

To the prospective builder of the modern home, window casement design and material is an important subject. Nothing about a house adds to or detracts from from its individuality like the windows. They contain all sorts of possibilities for distinctiveness, and care should be exercised in making the choice.

As a structural part of the modern home, the builder does well to study the practical needs of window frames or casements. The sashes should be so constructed that they will not warp or recede from the wall, or, on the other hand, expand under certain weather conditions and cease to function.

While pretty effects and satisfactory results may be had from well-seasoned, oaken window frames, the modern trend is in the direction of steel and bronze metals for this purpose. Neatness, durability and weather resistance are all combined in the metal casement together with a certain smartness to be had in no other type of frame. Modern steel window frames may be opened or closed without removing or in any way interfering with the screen.

LITERATURE on Standard Materials and Products used in the construction of the Modern Homes will be sent to you if you will check the subjects that interest you and mail to the National Modern Home Bureau, Inc., Real Estate Dept., Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

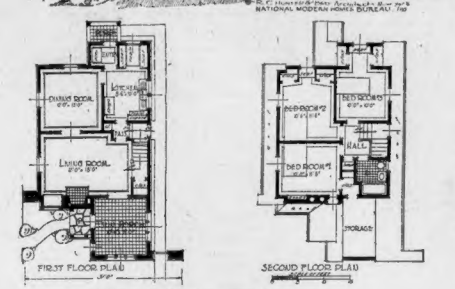
Rural English Cottage, Costing About $11,200



A Home of Character, Thoughtfully Designed

By National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc.

And further, it does not require a large lot to give a proper setting. The front measures thirty-one feet, which with an additional nine feet for a driveway gives a lot frontage of forty feet. Of course, additional frontage would give more open space, but forty feet is all that is really necessary.

The design of the exterior has been given much study by the architects. The composition is unusual and striking and the details are full of variety and interest. Note the sturdy chimney base and glassed bay, that opens from the living room, the charming gate beneath a stone arch that spans the service walk, the little bird home on the lower gable, the happy combination of a variety of structural materials, stone, stucco, brick and timber—these things are not accidents, they did not just happen. They are the result of thorough study on the part of the architects.

The casement windows used throughout are attractive both from within and from the outside. They have character that the guillotine-like double-hung windows can never possess.

COMPLETE working plans and specifications of the house illustrated above may be obtained for a nominal cost from the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc. Any technical questions regarding this house will be answered without cost or obligation. Address the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc., Real Estate Dept., Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. Refer to House A-69.

New Development at Wollaston

Harrison O. Apthorp Co. reports that final papers have passed whereby W. Cameron Forbes, trustee, has sold to Helen F. Hooper of Stoughton the property known as Forbes Hill, Wollaston. There are 22 acres in all, covered with beautiful trees, and a southwest exposure, giving an expansive view of the surrounding country.

The property borders on two streets, and the Furnace Brook Metropolitan Parkway and the Stony Brae Country Club. The purchaser intends to make an unusual development of about 100 house sites. W. W. Willson, Inc., were co-brokers in the transaction.

Day Interests Buy in Business Center

WHAT is considered as one of the most important realty deals of the last fortnight has been consummated this week and comes to light with the announcement through sources close to the Day Trust Company and R. L. Day Company.

The transaction has to do with the former International Trust Building, situated at 45 Milk st., corner of Arch and Devonshire st. It is understood that The Day Interests will occupy the first floor of the structure, only after an extensive program of alteration has been completed.

The W. H. Ballard Company is the realty organization responsible for the transaction.

Crystal Lake Is Showing Growth

Wide interest is being manifested in the summer colony of Crystal Lakes, an inviting resort gaining favor with seekers of ideal locations for relaxation and the outdoor advantages.

There are illuminating facts concerning Crystal Lake that direct attention to it for its growth and promise. It is reported that there are more than 50 cottages erected on the property, occupied by over 200 residents. Its close proximity with sailing, motor boating, bathing and fishing facilities make it desirable and favorable for those in search of just what Crystal Lake has to offer the prospective colonist. Motorists are particularly attracted, owing to the two miles of highways that run through the development.

If you would the dusty city streets forsake,
Take the road that leads you onward to North Chelmsford,
And you'll come in time to lovely Crystal Lake.
There the water gleams like jewels in the sunlight,
And the friendly trees will beckon you to stay,
And the notes of birds will fill your heart with gladness,

You may stroll through paths wherever you desire,
You may stand within the shade of spreading branches
You may walk o'er roads whose gold is not a fraud;
There your heart will find the peace that comes from Nature,
And your soul will be in harmony with God.

$200 Cash Award in Puzzle Test

HERE'S puzzle No. 5 (second series) in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser's unique Distinguished American Crossword Puzzle Test. Solve this and hold it until you have 6 six puzzles of the second week's series. Read the rules carefully.

Here's puzzle No. 5 of the second weekly series of the unique Distinguished American Crossword puzzles for which the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser will pay $200 each week in cash awards for the best solutions of each series.

This week's series ends with puzzle No. 6, which will appear in the Sunday Advertiser tomorrow. Cross word fans then will have until midnight Saturday, July 13, to send in their solutions and their sentence which must embody words appearing in the solution of puzzle No. 6.

Crossword fans are warned to send their sentence with their solutions and not in a separate letter. Be sure to read the rules regarding the sentence. There is no catch in it. Just write a sensible and complete sentence using as few or as many words as you desire from those in the puzzle. You can use other words, too, but it is not advisable (this is just a tip to the fans).

The third series of these novel puzzles starts with puzzle No. 1 (third week) in next Monday's Boston Evening American. Another set of cash awards totaling $200 will be offered for the best solutions in this series. You are invited to prove your skill and knowledge in solving crossword puzzles by joining these weekly tests.

Tonight at midnight is the closing time for sending in your solutions for the first week's series. Be sure to read the rules carefully.

RULES OF TEST

(Second Week)

1—Contestants daily and Sunday until further notice, the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser will print a new series of crossword puzzles called Distinguished American Crossword puzzles.

Each puzzle will contain the last name of a personality famous in some field of endeavor, and also a picture of the distinguished person. An invitation is extended to you to solve the puzzle and name the distinguished person.

2—Beginning the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser will pay $200 in cash awards weekly to readers who send in the nearest correctly-solved list of puzzles in accordance with these rules.

3—Beginning with the puzzle published in the Boston Evening American Monday, July 2, the second series will comprise six crossword puzzles, one published each day for six days (July 6, excluded), after the ninth crossword puzzle published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, July 14, you are to submit on the complete set of six puzzles.

4—The procedure will continue each week, and $200 in cash awards will be distributed each week for the best and most correctly solved set of crossword puzzles according to these rules.

First award (each week)	$100
Second award	50
Third award	25
Next five awards ($5 each)	25
Grand total of awards each week	$200

5—This offer is open to every citizen, women, boys and girls with the exception of employes of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser and their families.

6—Puzzles must be submitted in complete sets of six, starting the second week's series. DO NOT send in each puzzle separately. Keep all puzzles until you have the complete set or six consecutive days starting on Monday in the Boston Evening American. Be sure to include the puzzle which appears in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. After you have solved the six puzzles, send them to Crossword Test Editor, Boston Evening American, P. O. Box 3308, Boston, Mass. All entries must be in by midnight, one week after puzzle No. 6 has been printed. The closing time for the second series of puzzles is midnight, Saturday, July 13.

7—Each entry must be sent by first class mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned to the Post Office Department. With each entry a letter must be submitted giving your name and complete address and containing a sentence embodying words appearing in the last puzzle of the series or puzzle No. 6. This sentence may be long or short. You may use as few or as many of the words contained in puzzle No. 6 as you wish, but the sentence must be complete and it must make sense. Readers may submit as many sets of answers as they wish, but no contestant will be entitled to more than one award.

8—It is not necessary to buy the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser. You may copy or trace the puzzle and send them in.

9—The judges will be appointed by the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser and their decision will be based on the correctness and neatness of the solutions and the ingenuity and completeness of the sentence embodying words in puzzle No. 6. The decision of the judges will be final. In case of ties a duplicate award will be paid to each tying contestant.

10—The names of the winners of the cash awards will be published in the Boston Evening American.

Record Enrolment for U. of V. School

Burlington, Vt., July 6—The largest first day's registration in the history of the University of Vermont summer school was recorded, the number being 600.

Of these only enrolled, 260 were Vermont teachers while 345 were from outside the state, but the last named figure included a number of students who are regularly enrolled at the university and are taking summer courses in order to bring their averages in their regular college work.

Army Flier Forced Down on Way to Hub

Plymouth, Mass., July 6—Lieut. Rusk, U. S. A., in an army plane, bound from Barnstable to Boston, was forced down at Manomet with engine trouble thought to be water in gasoline.

He made a landing on the big field at the Point road and State highway and only damaged his landing gear.

PLANE BUILT, DELIVERED IN 2 DAYS

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

The fastest airplane sale and delivery in New England was recorded by the Boston Coast Aircraft Co. Corp., when it received a telephone order from Aroostook, Me., for an OXX-6 Travel Air sport plane, and delivered the ship at noon of the second day, according to Fred Ames, president of the company. Ames said that when the ship was ordered it was unassembled. The plane was test flown by him on the following afternoon, and delivered to the pilot for the Aroostook client, Lloyd.

The Curtiss Flying Service has employed another army air man, his is Lieut. Marvin Burnside, on leave from the Air Corps Reserve group, and considered one of the crack pilots at Langley Field, Va., where the group is stationed. Lieut. Burnside has been signed up as a student instructor, and with Lieut. Hanford Curtiss at the helm of the best first-rate teachers. Both of these army boys are on leave, and are flying with the Curtiss Co. for the fun that is in it.

Curtiss' Ford trimotor, No. 1, went to Bridgeport with Lowell R. Bayles at the controls and Maj. D. C. Collier, general manager of New England, and Georges Barry, ticket seller, as passengers. There is an air meet going on at Bridgeport, and the trimotor went down to prove the versatility of the Curtiss organization. The other trimotor Ford went to Nantucket on the regular evening run, with Ralph T. Wickford at the controls and 10 passengers occupying the cabin. Five of the passengers got out at Hyannis, and the rest rode through to Nantucket. Marvin Burnside was Wickford's copilot.

Paul Herman took two passengers to Manchester-by-the-Sea in pontoon Challenger engined Robin, returning at dusk. Paul has the limit of three hours' distance and also as a divine pilot. He is the youngest transport pilot on the Curtiss company's payroll, being but 23.

Fred Ames, president of East Coast, had a very interesting time the other day when, being invited out and to be forced to get the Travel Air monoplane down in a 600-foot field. He got down all right, and repaired the slight trouble with the J-6 300 horsepower motor, and then prepared to take off. His wife was sitting beside him, and Fred told her to cut the switch in case they weren't off the ground when the 275-foot mark was reached. A boy was stationed at this mark, holding a handkerchief in his hands, and this was the limit of Fred's takeoff distance. Fred allowed himself in order to clear the 20-foot embankment and trees in front of him. Fred pulled the ship off in the required distance. He landed finally at Westerly, R. I., none the worse for wear.

One of the seaplane pilots at the airport is getting his time in by flying everything with wings on it, pushing his total up above the hundred-hour mark and waiting for the summer flying boat season to begin. The chap is Harold G. "Waco" Crowley.

"Waco" began flying seaplanes when they were something but boats with wings hung on them.

Harold is no relation whatsoever to Capt. C. Crowley, the world's flier. Due to the fact that names they are thought to be brothers, but they are not.

Despite the fact that the motor picked the wrong time to act badly, we succeeded in getting an aerial picture of the Marblehead fire, with Tom Groce, the "Gypsy pilot," at the control of his own airplane. Tommy stuck to his post while the photos were snapped and didn't say a word about the motor until we were on the way back to the airport. Tommy succeeded in getting the ship back on the Boston Airport with the pictures.

SIGHT TURNER ABOARD BOAT AT SEA

Just as coast guardsmen were beginning to shake their heads over the fate of David G. Turner, 23, and the 16-foot boat in which he started across the Atlantic from Boston Wednesday, the crew of the cutter Antietam spotted the little craft bobbing about off Cape Ann.

The near gale of the Fourth of July hadn't bothered him or his little cockleshell at all. When the cutter came alongside he shouted, "Everything's O. K." and held on his course.

Turner is sailing toward Halifax on the first leg of his trip to Europe and is headed in an east-northeasterly direction. The blow, which set even large craft off their course, apparently did not change his course to any extent.

33 Hurt in Crash

St. Louis, Mo., July 6—Thirty-three persons were injured, none believed seriously, when a Burlington passenger train from Kansas City backed into a Frisco accommodation train just outside the train shed at Union station.
